Call to Arms For Ethiopia Awaits Only Geneva Word

League Envoys to Send Notice If Italy Is Not Checked.

Order to 2,000,000 Is Expected Soon

Selassie's Great Drums to Beat Out Message of War Over Hills.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Sept. 30.—Emperor Haile Selassie tonight awaited only a signal from his League of Nations envoys to start the drumbeats that will call approximately 2,000,000 eager warriors to arms.

He made intensive preparations for this general mobilization—to start at the first news the League has failed to stave off an Italian attack.

Authorities said the fateful signal might come within a few days.

The call to arms will be carried out in the traditional Ethiopian fashion. The Emperor's "negarits"—official great drums—which are his means of promulgating laws and warning the populace in time of national peril, will resound across the mountains and valleys "with the fury of trumpets before Jericho," officials said.

The Ethiopian government denied that the general mobilization had been set arbitrarily for tomorrow or Wednesday.

They denied also that Italy had begun hostilities in the north, that Italian pilots were flying over Ethiopian territory or that Italian ground forces were firing machine guns and heavier weapons in the hope of provoking an Ethiopian response.

Another report spiked by authorities was one that two shipments of Japanese munitions had arrived.

"If Italian airmen dared to fly over Ethiopian territory our forces would shoot them down," said one high government spokesman. "It also would be silly for Italian troops to waste artillery and machine gun ammunition since the Ethiopian armies are stationed 20 miles behind the actual front."

As for a report Italians had crossed the Ethiopian frontier, this stated:

"If the Fascists invade, the news will travel like wildfire and will be broadcast immediately over the empire to galvanize the nation into action."

Joan, Angry, Denies Intent to Wed Tone

Actress 'Quite Upset' Over Persistent Reports.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 30.—Joan Crawford today said she was "quite upset" over insistent reports that she and Franchot Tone, her leading man who escorted her almost across the continent, are planning to be married. She indignantly denied she had any intention of entering matrimony again.

"Furthermore, I have not engaged any bridal suite or purchased a trousseau," she told reporters when she arrived here by train from Hollywood.

Tone, who came East on the same train, did not arrive with the actress. He left the train at Harmon, N. Y., she said.

"Can you say if Tone has any plans of getting married?" she was asked.

"His father and brother are already married," she said, leaving the interviewers with that answer to puzzle over.

The actress said she plans to be in New York a month.

Britain Silent on "Secret Bid" For French Aid if Crisis Arises

Reported Query As to Action If Navy Is Attacked in Mediterranean Doubted in View of Hoare's Note; Claim There Is No Quarrel With Italy.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 30.—Recurring reports Great Britain has resorted to secret, back-stage diplomacy to bulwark her position against Italy in the Mediterranean Sea went unconfirmed and undenied in official circles tonight.

A "hush-hush" attitude greeted the reports, from both Paris and Geneva, that Great Britain has addressed an inquiry to France to learn what the latter would do in the case of an unprovoked attack on the British navy in the Mediterranean Sea.

The official refusal to discuss the matter in any form led to immediate speculation in diplomatic circles, where it was pointed out, however, that this official silence was the only thing lending credence to the reports.

In these quarters it was believed unlikely Great Britain would address such an inquiry to France on the heels of the note of Sir Samuel Hoare, the British foreign secretary, which in effect refused to tie Britain's hands in the case of future European aggression.

Pact Plans Denied.

Inquiries as to whether an Anglo-French non-aggression pact, outside the framework of the League, was contemplated were greeted in authoritative quarters with categorical denials.

Diplomats further agreed it was unlikely Great Britain would expect to get a solid French commitment on a hypothetical case unless this nation was prepared to reciprocate—something the note to France indicated Britain was not prepared to do.

Military sources also advanced the belief Great Britain has not so far lost confidence in its navy as to arrange against the day when Italy might challenge it. They thought, too, that such a move on the part of Great Britain would be inconsistent with this nation's continued insistence she has no quarrel with Italy and that her entire con-

Italians Deport Playboy Cousin Of 5-10 Heiress

Young Donahue's 'Viva Ethiopia' Cry Nets Trip to French Border.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 30.—Italian police disclosed tonight that James Donahue, gay young cousin of Barbara, the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, paid for his fun in shouting "Viva Ethiopia!" at a fascist demonstration by taking an escorted trip to the French border.

The gendarmes said young Donahue was accompanied by two detectives to the border on last night's Paris express train while the countess, heiress to 5-and-10-cent-store millions in America, remained in Rome.

Donahue, police said, admitted the offense to Italian feelings, but did not appear worried. On the other hand, they added, his cousin and her titled husband disclaimed responsibility for the incident. They said they liked Italy and were "admirers of Premier Mussolini." Other friends of the young American socialite called Donahue's action "a childish trick."

The gendarmes emphasized Donahue was not arrested, but merely escorted to the French line. They said they asked him if he had enough money to get to the border and that he answered:

"Certainly. I even have a house in Paris, and I will go there."

Donahue, 19 years old and a frequent transatlantic traveler, was alleged to have shouted "Viva Ethiopia!" from his hotel window while the count and countess were having cocktails with him Friday night. At the time, a group of young Italians was engaged in a patriotic demonstration in the street below.

Dutch Schultz Gets Writ; Bail Reduced to $50,00

Philadelphia, Sept. 30 (AP).—Judge Joseph Buffington of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted a writ of habeas corpus today to Arthur (Dutch Schultz), Flegenheimer, charged with income tax evasion, and reduced bail from $75,000 to $50,000.

Purvis Aids 'Woman in Red' As U. S. Insists on Deportation

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Federal authorities tonight declared they would continue to seek deportation of the Dillinger-slaying "Woman in Red" despite Helvin H. Purvis' affirmation of her services in ambushing the late Public Enemy No. 1.

Shortly after the former chief of the Federal agents here had issued a statement that as "part of her reward" he believed Mrs. Anna Sage should be allowed to remain in the United States, Federal District Attorney Michael Igoe said:

"I have not fully read Mr. Purvis' statement, but we are going ahead with our effort to see that Anna Sage is deported."

He could not comment further on Purvis' confirmation of the woman's claim.

In a typewritten statement which the former "G Man" handed out in the press room of the Federal Court building after he had conferred with the district attorney, Purvis said the woman, publicized as the wearer of a red dress the night John Dillinger walked out of a neighborhood movie to his doom, had "furnished the information which led to Dillinger's capture and I, for one, am not ungrateful."

"I sincerely believe some steps should be taken to prevent her deportation," his statement added.

"She desired to remain in the United States, and, as part of her reward, I believe she should be allowed to do so."

Mrs. Sage, fighting an Immigration Bureau's order for her return to Rumania as an undesirable alien, asserted she alone led Dillinger into the Federal trap the night of July 22, 1934. She claimed Purvis guaranteed her she would not be sent

Sherman Jury Holds His Fate In Wife's Death

By the United Press.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 30.—The defendant's oath of innocence ringing in its ears, a jury tonight debated whether to send Newell Paige Sherman to the electric chair as a wife-slayer.

The Singletary Lake "American tragedy" case was given to 12 men of Worcester County at 4:34 p. m. after fiery final arguments, the judge's charge, and the giant young Sutton choir singer's impassioned personal appeal for acquittal. Seventeen minutes later they had begun their deliberations.

Standing erect and calm at his chair in the prisoner's dock, Sherman faced the men who were to decide his fate and, in a strong, clear voice, said:

"Gentlemen, as God is my witness, the tipping of the canoe was accidental. I committed no crime."

Four Possible Verdicts.

Superior Judge Thomas J. Hammond told the jury it might return four possible verdicts in the case—a small-town scandal involving the drowning of 22-year-old Alice Dudley Sherman the night of July 20, and Sherman's admitted clandestine romance with another girl.

The jury may find Sherman guilty of first degree murder, carrying a mandatory death sentence; second degree murder, demanding

Pilot Injured in Crash Near Train of Roosevelt

Redwell, taking-off, was only about 60 feet in the air when his motor failed. The ship caught fire, but he managed to extricate himself.

Rotterdam's Passengers Are Rescued

Taken Off Reefed Liner by Mercy Ship Off Jamaica.

Bermuda Is Fearful as Hurricane Moves Northward.

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 30 (AP).—Reports reaching here tonight said all the passengers of the grounded liner Rotterdam, off the coast of Jamaica, had been taken aboard the S. S. Ariguani and that the rescue ship was due to arrive at Kingston at 11 p. m. tonight.

To facilitate the accommodation of passengers, the government will will open the Constant Spring Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 30.—Transfer of passengers from the reef-locked liner Rotterdam off the coast of Jamaica was begun as a tropical hurricane, moving in the Atlantic tonight, brought fear to Bermuda

The steamship Ariguani, which put out from Kingston, Jamica, early in the day, was the rescue ship. The Rotterdam carried about 450 passengers and a crew of 526.

The Rotterdam's passengers were due at Kingston tonight.

Capt. O. Van Dulken, veteran master of the Rotterdam, messaged to the New York office: "Everybody is happy. The passengers are taking it more or less as an experience."

The Jacksonville Weather Bureau late today said the hurricane probably would pass a "short distance to the northwest of Bermuda," as it still appeared moving northeastward. Reports from Hamilton, Bermuda, where the wealthy play, said residents feared the storm might strike there early tonight.

Bimini Devastated.

Tiny Bimini, coral island 5 miles east of Miami, which prohibition era rum runners used as a base in supplying their clients in the United States, lay devastated, but there was no loss of life.

The Rotterdam reported this morning it was locked on a reef in the Caribbean 60 miles southeast of Kingston. The Ariguani earlier reported by wireless to the Associated Press that the Rotterdam was pounding slightly on the reef and her hold was leaking.

The storm's destruction began in Jamaica Friday night when the tail end of the hurricane lashed the island, killed two and caused heavy damage to banana and other crops. It passed on to Cuba, where it cut a swath 150 miles wide through three provinces. Deaths were reported at 30, with hundreds homeless and heavy property loss.

Florida Escapes Gale.

For 17 hours it menaced the east coast of Florida. Hurricane warnings flew from Key West to West Palm Beach until late Saturday, when the storm veered slightly to the east, leaving the Florida coast with only a blow. Since that time it moved across Bimini, sent high winds to the islands in the Bahamas group and rushed menacingly toward Bermuda.

Walter J. Bennett, meteorologist in charge of the Jacksonville Weather Bureau, said the Jacksonville office would cease to track the hurricane tonight, leaving that task to the Washington bureau.

The liner Rotterdam was en route back to New York after a cruise to the Virgin Islands and to La Guayra in Venezuela. The ship left New York on September 21. Morant Cays where the ship is held by the rocks, is due south of the treacherous

U. S. Acts as Strikes Threaten To Paralyze Ocean Commerce

McGrady Flies West to Seek Peace As Union Longshoremen Are Ordered to Walk Out at New Orleans in Growing Dispute.

By the United Press.

Disputes between organized labor unions and shipowners last night threatened to paralyze the Nation's sea commerce on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and on the Eastern Gulf.

So disturbing were reports reaching the Capital from Pacific ports that Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady left for the West by airplane yesterday. He will go to Los Angeles to study the situation at first hand and to lend his services in restoring peace among the workers and employers.

Other Federal officials are watching the situation in the Gulf of Mexico, where trouble is expected in a few hours. The International Longshoremen's Association has ordered a strike today of its members at all New Orleans docks which do not recognize the I. L. A. as the unit for collective bargaining.

Simultaneously union longshoremen in Houston and Galveston, Tex., will open a boycott against the ports of New Orleans, Gulfport, Mobile and Pensacola. M. J. Dwyer, of Galveston, district president of the I. L. A., said stevedores in other Texas ports probably would join in refusing to handle cargoes loaded by nonunion workers.

The disputes in New Orleans and on the Pacific Coast have been boiling for many weeks. In an attempt to restore peace, Joseph E. Ryan, international president of I. L. A., asked the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election of longshoremen in New Orleans. Ross Holt, district president, notified the board that the union workers would accept the results of such an election as final.

Although the dispute itself is localized, the effect of a strike of longshoremen in Louisiana would be felt on Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Unionists in these ports, labor leaders explained, would refuse to handle cargoes loaded by nonunion men. In addition, it was said, union seamen would not ship on these boats.

The trouble on the Pacific Coast is of a more complicated nature. It began months ago when maritime workers in Vancouver, B. C., went

Rail Empire Rule Seized By Brothers

Banking Group Headed by Morgan Suffers $45,297,000 Loss.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 30.—The Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland reached out today to seize control of their $3,000,000,000 railroad empire as it was dangled over a public auction block in Manhattan.

The two former real estate salesmen, aided by a Great Lakes steamship operator and an Indiana preserving jar manufacturer, were high bidders for the key securities carrying control of the greatest railway mileage ever assembled in private hands.

Their bids, aggregating $3,121,000, with $1,582,000 offered by a New York investment house, took all the collateral offered at auction by a banking group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., on default of loans to the Van Sweringens, aggregating with back interest about $50,000,000.

Take Over 51 Per Cent.

The Van Sweringen purchase took all of the approximately 51 per cent interest in Alleghany Corporation, their key railroad holding company, with securities of the Van Sweringen Corporation, the Cleveland terminals and other strictly Van Sweringen enterprises.

The purchase by the investment house—Hallgarten & Co.—was of certain moderate-sized blocks of listed securities of some of the Van Sweringen railways and a few industrial corporations, not essential to control of the far-flung empire.

The banking group, receiving in the aggregate only $4,703,000, suffered a loss of $45,297,000. The largest part of this loss, it is understood, was taken by J. P. Morgan & Co., and smaller parts by associated banks.

The Van Sweringen brothers took control of the archstone of their vast holdings through the newly formed Mid-America Corporation, which was incorporated at Columbus, Ohio, only last Saturday.

Col. Leonard W. Ayres, of Cleveland, well-known banker and business analyst, bid in the securities sought by the Cleveland brothers as the representative of Mid-America Corporation.

Made Early in Depression.

O. P. Van Sweringen revealed that he and his brother, M. J., were backed principally by George A. Ball (Muncie, Ind.), glass jar manufacturer, and G. A. Tomlinson, of Cleveland, operator of fleets of Great Lakes steamships, in the formation of Mid-America.

With this purchase, the Van Sweringens and their associates regained actual control of the vital securities in their corporate structure after they had lain in the laps of the Wall Street banking group for several months, as collateral against defaulted loans.

These loans were made early in the depression in an effort to tide over the Cleveland brothers as their huge pyramid of railroads and railroad holding companies met the first impact of the depression. While the Morgan banking group declined to comment, it was learned authoritatively that the banks had written down the value of the loans on their books some time back, and had been expecting to take a big loss on the sale of the collateral.

As one banker privately explained it, the loans were made in the first place partly as a patriotic move, in an effort to prevent the depression from being aggravated by financial embarrassment to the Van Sweringens and their associates.

O. P. Van Sweringen, the only one of the brothers to attend the sale, said as he was being congratulated on his victory:

"I would rather have paid the bill," referring to the full amount owed the banking group.

Recovery Has Begun, He Declares at Boulder Dam.

Favors Hopkins' Works Program

U. S. Expenditures to Decline Rapidly, He Indicates.

By Raymond Clapper.
A Staff Correspondent.

Boulder City, Nev., Sept. 30.—Private industry must from now on bear the principal responsibility of accelerating re-employment, President Roosevelt said in his address dedicating Boulder Dam today.

Taking this mighty dam, the largest in the world, as a symbol of his public works program, although the job was undertaken during the Coolidge Administration, Mr. Roosevelt said that Government spending has begun to show its effect on consumer spending, and in putting persons to work in private industry.

With it all, he said, with work proceeding on projects large and small in practically every county in the country, the actual credit of Government agencies is stronger and safer than at any time in six years. Many States, he added, have improved their financial position in the last two years, with tax arrearages steadily declining and municipal tax receipts being paid when taxes fall due.

Calls on Industry.

"It is a simple fact," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "that Government spending is already beginning to show definite signs of its effect on consumer spending; that the putting of people to work by the Government has put other people to work through private employment, and that in 2½ years we have come to the point where private industry must bear the principal responsibility of keeping the processes of greater employment moving forward with accelerated speed."

Mr. Roosevelt used this occasion to justify the principle of the works relief program against criticism that it is of less value than the heavier PWA program, devoted to more monumental projects of the type of Boulder Dam. He said that this great Boulder Dam is an undertaking which has been given universal approval.

"But," he asked, "can we say that a 5-foot brushwood dam across the headwaters of an arroyo, and costing only a millionth part of Boulder Dam, is an undesirable project or a waste of money? Can we say that the great brick high school, costing $2,000,000, is a useful expenditure, but that a little wooden school house project costing $10,000 is a wasteful extravagance? Is it fair to approve a huge city boulevard and, at the same time, to disapprove the improvement of a muddy farm-to-market road?"

Thus, Mr. Roosevelt, without personalities, took his stand beside young Harry Hopkins and the works progress program as against the policy advocated by Harold L. Ickes, public works administrator, who has fought for a program of heavier, more permanent works, and against the tendency toward leaf-raking work. Both of these administrators, who are accompanying Mr. Roosevelt on his trip, heard him thus commit himself publicly to the decision which, after a tense period of bickering, was made before leaving Washington and has already been put into effect.

Tapering Off Seen.

Without saying so directly, Mr. Roosevelt appeared in these remarks to have forecast a sharp tapering off of the works policy after the present program is completed.

This interpretation seemed to be further borne out by the President's budget summation yesterday, in which he took the position that recovery was under way and that expenditures should decline rapidly and permit the carrying of the public debt without any further increase in the tax load. It was taken, not only as a defense of his program to date, but as a further elaboration of his recent promise of a breathing spell.

Mr. Roosevelt's address at Boulder Dam was significant in that he omitted discussion of public power policy, except for brief reference to the yardstick feature of Boulder Dam. In line with his recent tendency of appeasing business hostility, Mr. Roosevelt seemed to be taking care to avoid reviving wounds left by the bitter fight over utility regulation. Neither did he permit himself to expand on dreams of great public power empires

Gifts of Stock To Save Taxes At $13,000,000

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Presumably in an effort to avoid the higher gift taxes, which become effective January 1, and the higher estate taxes now in effect, corporation officials and directors last month gave away stock currently valued at approximately $13,000,000, the Securities and Exchange Commission revealed yesterday.

Foremost among the August donors was George F. Baker, whose father was one of the country's poineer financiers and who inherited one of America's great fortunes. Baker's gifts in August had a value of approximately $4,688,000. The SEC report did not reveal the recipients of these gifts.

Securities which Baker reported to the SEC as having given away during August were as follows:

70,000 shares of General Motors common with a stock market value of $2,773,750.

5 Hurt as 7 Gunmen Attempt To Rob Bank; 'Midget' Hunted

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Police tonight sought Henry J. (Midget) Fernekes, desperado and recently escaped from the Joliet Penitentiary, as the leader of seven gunmen who left five persons wounded in their flight from an unsuccessful robbery attempt at the University State Bank on the South Side.

The possibility that Alvin Karpis, Public Enemy No. 1, might have been a member of the gang, was discussed by police, but D. M. Ladd, Chicago chief of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, said a description furnished him was not that of Karpis.

William Fleming, 58, retired policeman, a guard at the bank, was shot twice through the chest and critically wounded when he drew his pistol to fight it out with the gunmen as they invaded the bank shouting "It's a stick-up."

At the same time, Miss Astrid Olson, a teller, and other employes stepped on tear gas releases, filling the bank with blinding fumes.

In the fusillade between Fleming and the gunmen three customers fell. Mrs. Dorothy Gregory, 29, was shot in the hip and the bullet lodged in her spine. Dr. Thorne Deuel, 45, a research associate in anthropology at the University of Chicago, was shot in the left ankle, and Carl Ruether, 40, a salesman, suffered a flesh wound in the right side.

A few minutes later, 6 miles northwest of the robbery scene, the gunmen, accompanied by a woman and either a boy or a small man riding in a second car, tried to stop which marked his addresses a year ago when he visited the Columbia River projects and later when he inspected the Tennessee Valley development.

Gov. E. W. Marland ordered the destruction today of $30,000 worth seized near here. It was believed the whisky—1,342 cases—either was intended for "bootlegging" in Oklahoma or was hidden by persons attempting to evade the Missouri tax by keeping it here and running it across the line.

Governors and public officials of many surrounding States were present for the ceremony. Because the dam is located in an isolated spot, connected with civilization only by a narrow winding 10-mile mountain road, there was great difficulty in handling the traffic. Visitors were warned to bring water and food to last them through the day because of the difficulty of traveling back and forth. Sun beat down at a temperature close to 100 degrees.

Grandeur Impressive.

It would be a stolid person indeed who could be here today, inside this jagged mountain horizon, and not feel moved by the grandeur of the scene and its meaning.

Set down in these deep scars cut into the rock by nature through the ages, is the little wedge of man-made concrete across Black Canyon. Down at the bottom of this deep cleft, the dam appears as a little white plug.

Yet, tiny in nature's scale of values here, it is monumental in man's. Perhaps the gods would not consider it much, but for the human race it is a truly heroic achievement. Here man has attacked nature in one of its most ruthless and brutal manifestations. All of the elements combined to fashion a fortress against the puny race of men. Heat, solid rock and alternating drought and torrent did their utmost. But men came in, defied the heat, blasted out the rock, dammed up the torrent and will let the water out even during the drought periods. Not only that, we're making a slave of the giant and his power will be carried over man-made lines to Los Angeles, as far away as from Washington to New York, to turn wheels and to pump water to a million people on the Pacific Coast. It is a triumph of man's science and co-operative organization.

Yet, critter that he is, his small vanity was on hand, even on this occasion. The controversy over attaching the name of Herbert Hoover to this dam obtruded itself into the ceremony. Under the Hoover Administration the dam was named the Hoover Dam, by then Secretary of Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, but this was never accepted by Congress. When the Roosevelt Administration came in, the new Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, struck out the name and changed it back to the original—Boulder Dam. Actually the dam is on Black Canyon but the original site was in Boulder Canyon and the first name clung.

In his address as master of ceremonies, Secretary Ickes, who has been criticized by friends of former President Hoover for changing the name back from Hoover Dam to Boulder Dam, declared that if the dam was to bear the name of any living man, it should be named for Senator Hiram Johnson.

Johnson Is Absent.

Johnson, with former Representative Philip Swing, of California, led the fight for the legislation authorizing the dam. Neither was present today, Johnson being ill and Swing being detained in Washington.

Ickes did not mention Mr. Hoover but all present knew what he had in mind when he said:

"It has been well said that if this dam should bear the name of any living person, then it should be christened Johnson Dam."

This thrust was expected to fan a new controversy which has raged. Western newspapers, partial to Mr. Hoover, have been carrying editorials recently criticizing the Roosevelt Administration for erasing Mr. Hoover's name from this monument. One California newspaper has an office rule that the project shall be called "Hoover Dam," and has consistently ignored the order by Ickes changing the name.

Some of the governors from surrounding States who attended the ceremony privately regretted that the controversy should have been revived during the dedication of the dam. Mr. Hoover's partisans say that he fought in behalf of the project for years and that he only opposed some details concerning the power aspects. As Secretary of Commerce, he presided over the seven-State conference at which the States whose territory are affected by the project undertook to allocate water rights and divisions of power among themselves. One State, Arizona, still has not approved the compact which resulted.

The Roosevelt Administration has taken the position that Mr. Hoover was hostile to the project, attempted to sabotage it, and that, except for the persistence of Mr. Hoover's California foe, Senator Johnson, the project would not have been undertaken.

Describes Transformation.

In his address of dedication President Roosevelt described the transformation that was being wrought in this mountainous desert. Ten years ago he said "this place was uninhabitated, a forbidding desert."

"In the bottom of a gloomy canyon, whose precipitous walls rose to a height of more than 1,000 feet, flowed a turbulent, dangerous river," Mr. Roosevelt said. "The mountains on either side of the canyon were difficult of access, with neither road nor trail, and their rocks were protected by neither trees nor grass from the blazing heat of the sun. The site of Boulder City was a cactus-covered waste. The transformation wrought here is a twentieth century marvel."

Between You and Me

A Fundamental Difference in Dams; the Grand Coulee's Value in Uncertain Future.

By Raymond Clapper

BOULDER CITY, Nev. Sept. 30. One important consideration of policy was not touched upon by President Roosevelt in his address dedicating Boulder Dam here today. That is the fundamental difference between this project, begun under the Coolidge Administration, and such New Deal works as Grand Coulee Dam.

The difference is this:

Boulder Dam was the result of a need that already had developed. Los Angeles, in the few years of the boom period, tripled its population from 300,000 to a million. That tripled its need for water, and in this country water is hard to get. So it was conceived that here, about 250 miles away, the canyon formation was such that a great dam could be put in to catch the torrential season floods of the Colorado River and hold them back against the dry season of the year. The primary need was to get water for Los Angeles.

The gigantic power to be produced was an incidental but a major one which dovetailed perfectly. For the water, to be piped to Los Angeles, must be lifted over the mountains, and power was needed for that. Actually the water will be taken out of a secondary dam farther down the river and piped 235 miles to Los Angeles. The city pays for that aqueduct.

As the growth of Los Angeles required more water, it also required more power. So Boulder Dam power will be wired to Los Angeles. It is to be bought, part by the city, part by the Southern California Edison, and part is reserved for the adjoining States of Nevada and Arizona.

Here is the key point: Contracts for sale of this Boulder Dam power were signed and sealed before a single stroke of work was done on the dame. The revenue thus assured in advance, all nailed down in contract form, will be sufficient to more than pay for the cost of the dam in 50 years.

That is the foundation on which this tremendous project rests.

And there is one more angle. Surrounding States and the Imperial Valley of California need more irrigation water and incidental power. These will come from portions of the water and power to be reserved for these uses. In addition, the danger of devastating floods in the Imperial Valley is checked by the dam. This year, in fact, since the water began to be caught in the dam, a heavy flood occurred which, had it not been held here at Boulder, probably would have swept through the levees and into the Imperial Valley, doing millions of dollars' worth of damage to that highly specialized agricultural garden land.

Now consider Grand Coulee Dam, on the Columbia River, a New Deal project. And also consider Passamaquoddy Dam in Maine, the tide-harnessing project. It is a New Deal project. Together they will cost probably double what Boulder Dam is costing. Grand Coulee will be larger than Boulder. It will become the largest in the world.

Yet in neither of these projects is there any visible use for the gigantic power to be produced. Both are in sparsely settled localities, out of reach of existing users. Both are years—decades, at least—ahead of their time. Government officials do not know where they can find markets for the power and consequently they have no visible means of income with which to pay off the cost. Both were forced through by political pressure, against the better judgment of hard-boiled engineers in the Interior Department. Secretary of the Interior Ickes opposed both of them. They were forced on him.

Boulder Dam comes into being after the need has developed, when it is known just what the need is and the nature of it. In the construction it is possible to take advantage of the latest engineering and scientific developments.

Grand Coulee and Passamaquoddy are being built before anyone knows what conditions of the future will require, and while the work will be done in accordance with the most modern engineering development, who knows what superior electrical equipment will be produced in the next decade or two? Perhaps important permanent parts of these works already will be obsolete by the time there is real economic and social need for them.

The day's developments showed an increasing British irritation at Italy and a growing feeling this Nation would not censure Ethiopia if Emperor Haile Selassie orders the immediate mboilization he has threatened.

Insistence Likely.

Likewise, there were statements from authoritative sources that Great Britain will insist upon Italy's setling her quarrel with Ethiopia within the League and that Great Britain is not open to any bribes or bargains aimed at getting her to countenance Mussolini's East African adventure.

Selassie's warning to the League that he may be forced to order general mobilization quickly was viewed as justified. It further was pointed out such a mobilization would require at least a month because of crude communications and transportation facilities.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, in advance of Wednesday's cabinet meeting, conferred with King George, while other ministers assembled to listen to first-hand reports from Geneva. They will get these from Anthony Eden, minister for League affairs, who is flying from Paris tomorrow, expecting to return to Geneva for Thursday's Council meeting.

Dino Grandi, the Italian Minister, visited the foreign office late today and conferred with Sir Samuel Hoare on the general situation.

The Italian embassy said "no proposals were brought forward. It was merely an exchange of views on the general situation."

In the exchange of shots which followed Chester White, 23, a Negro bystander, was shot in the leg. The gunmen escaped. Flynn's car was found to have 20 bullet holes in it.

M. C. Wood, owner of a store a few doors from the bank, identified a picture of Fernekes as one of the gunmen. Ferneke escaped from the penitentiary at Joliet last August disguised as a visitor.

Fleming said there were seven men in the robbers' car, three having entered the bank while four waited outside.

Police believed the gang split forces and used two cars after leaving the bank.

Chain Retail Trade at Peak For Five Years

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 30.—Expansion of chain store trade in August continued at an increased rate with all sections of retail business enjoying the most generous prefall consumer buying in five years.

In recording these gains, the chains have maintained the favorable spread of business gain as compared with 1934. The average increase in sales for the entire group of companies covered by the Chain Store Age was better than 5 per cent. Sales increases by class groups ranged from 3 to 11 per cent over the corresponding month of 1934, with some individual company gains considerably greater.

The index for the month was 98.0 of the 1929-1931 average for the month taken as 100. This compares with a figure of 96.4 in the previous month. The index for August, 1934, was 93.0.

Grocery chain moved into new high ground. Except for a minor interruption, the index of sales for this group has advanced steadily since October of last year. The figure for August was 92.5 as compared with 91.0 in July and 87.2 in August, 1934.

Sales of the drug group, comprising two leading chains, showed the greatest precentage gain over August, 1934, of any group, with an increase of 11 per cent. The index for August this year was 114.0, against 108.8 in July and 102.0 in August, last year.

The index for the five-and-ten department chain group in August stood at 101.0 as against 98.0 in the same month last year.

In the shoe group, the index of sales of two chains was 104.0 as compared with a revised figure of 102.0 in July.

While rising prices have had a great deal to do with the larger volume, a large portion of the increase has been the result of a greater number of unit sales. This has been noted particularly in the fixed-price stores.

Results for the early part of September were spotty on account of prolonged bad weather conditions over practically all of the Eastern section of the country.

Text of President's Speech at Boulder Dam

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Boulder Dam, Sept. 30.—The text of the address made here today by President Roosevelt at the dedication of Boulder Canyon Dam in Colorado River, follows:

Ten years ago the place where we are gathered was an unpeopled, forbidding desert. In the bottom of a gloomy canyon, whose precipitous walls rose to a height of more than 1,000 feet, flowed a turbulent, dangerous river. The mountains on either side of the canyon were difficult of access, with neither road nor trail, And their rocks were protected by neither trees nor grass from the blazing heat of the sun. The site of Boulder City was a cactus-covered waste. The transformation wrought here is a twentieth-century marvel.

We are here to celebrate the completion of the greatest dam in the world, rising 726 feet above the bed rock of the river and altering the geography of a whole region; to see the creation of the largest artificial lake in the world 115 miles long, holding enough water to cover the State of Connecticut to a depth of 10 feet, and to see nearing completion a power-house which will contain the largest generators and turbines yet installed in this country, machinery which can continuously supply 1,835,000 horsepower of electric energy. All these dimensions are superlative.

They represent and embody the accumulated engineering knowledge and experience of centuries, and when we behold them it is fitting that we pay tribute to the genius of their designers. We recognize also the energy, resourcefulness and zeal of the builders, who, under the greatest physical obstacles, have pushed this work forward to completion two years in advance of the contract requirements. But especially we express our gratitude to the thousands of workers who gave brain and brawn to the work of construction.

The Problem Is Great.

Beautiful and great as this structure is, it must also be considered in its relationship to the agricultural and industrial development and in its contribution to the health and comfort of the people who live in the Southwest.

To divert and distribute the waters of an arid region, so that there shall be security of rights and efficiency in service, is one of the greatest problems of law and of administration to be found in any Government. The farms, the cities and the people who live along the many thousands of miles of this river and its tributaries all depend for their permanence in value upon the conservation, the regulation, and the equitable division of its ever-changing water supply.

What has been accomplished on the Colorado in working out such a scheme of distribution is inspiring. Through the cooperation of the States whose people depend upon this river, and of the Federal Government which is concerned in the general welfare, there is being constructed a system of distributive works of laws and practices, which will insure to the millions of people who now dwell in this basin and the millions of others who will come to dwell here in future generations, a just, safe and permanent system of water rights. In devising these policies and the means of putting them into practice the Bureau of Reclamation has taken, and is destined to take in the future a leading and helpful part. The bureau has been the instrument which gave effect to the legislation introduced in Congress by Senator Hiram Johnson and Cognressman Phil Swing.

A Threatening Torrent.

As an unregulated river, the Colorado added little of value to the region this dam serves. When in flood the river was a threatening torrent. In the dry months of the year it shrank to a trickling stream. For a generation the people of Imperial Valley had lived in the shadow of disaster from the river which provided their livelihood, and which is the foundation of their hopes for themselves and their children. Every spring they waited with dread the coming of a flood, and nearly every autumn they feared a shortage of water would destroy their crops.

The gates of the diversion tunnels were closed here at Boulder Dam last February. In June a great flood came down the river. It came roaring down the canyons of the Colorado, through Grand Canyon, Iceberg and Boulder Canyons, but it was caught and safely held behind Boulder Dam.

Last year a drought of unprecedented severity was visited upon the West. The watershed of the Colorado River did not escape. In July the canals of the Imperial Valley went dry. Crop losses in that valley alone totaled $10,000,000. Had Boulder Dam been completed one year earlier, this loss would have been prevented, because the spring flood could have been stored to furnish a steady water supply for the long dry summer and fall.

Across the San Jacinto Mountains southwest of Boulder Dam the cities of Southern California are constructing an aqueduct to cost $220,000,000, which they have raised, for the purpose of carrying the regulated waters of the Colorado to the Pacific Coast, 259 miles away.

Navigation Made Possible.

Across the desert and mountains to the west and south run great electric transmission lines by which factory motors, street and household lights and irrigation pumps will be operated in southern Arizona and California. Part of this power will be used in pumping the water through the aqueduct to supplement the domestic supplies of Los Angeles and surrounding cities.

Navigation of the river from Boulder Dam to the Grand Canyon has been made possible, a 115-mile stretch that has been traversed less than half a dozen times in history. An immense new park has been created for the enjoyment of all our people.

At what cost was this done? Boulder Dam and the power houses together cost a total of $108,000,000. All of which will be repaid with interest in 50 years under the contracts for sale of the power. Under these contracts, already completed, not only will the cost be repaid, but the way is opened for the provision of needed light and power to the consumer at reduced rates. In the expenditure of the price of Boulder Dam during the depression years, work was provided for 4,000 men, most of them heads of families, and many thousands more were enabled to earn a livelihood through manufacture of materials and machinery.

And this is true in regard to the thousands of projects undertaken by the Federal Government, by the States and by the municipalities in recent years. The overwhelming majority of them are of definite and permanent usefulness.

Throughout our national history we have had a great program of public improvements, and in these past two years all that we have done has been to accelerate that program. We know, too, that the reason for this speeding up was the need of giving relief to several million men and women whose earning capacity had been destroyed by the complexities and lack of thought of the economic system of the past generation.

Small Projects Also Create Jobs.

No sensible person is foolish enough to draw hard-and-fast classifications as to usefulness or need. Obviously, for instance, this great Boluder Dam warrants universal approval because it will prevent floods and flood damage, because it will irrigate thousands of acres of tillable land and because it will generate electricity to turn the wheels of many factories and illuminate countless homes.

But can we say that a five-foot brushwood dam across the headwaters of an arroyo, and costing only a millionth part of Boulder Dam, is an undesirable project or a waste of money? Can we say that the great brick high school, costing $2,000,000, is a useful expenditure, but that a little wooden schoolhouse project, costing $10,000, is a wasteful extravagance? Is it fair to approve a huge city boulevard and, at the same time, to disapprove the improvement of a muddy farm-to-market road?

While we do all of this, we give actual work to the unemployed and at the same time we add to the wealth and assets of the Nation. These efforts meet with the approval of the people of the Nation.

In a little over two years this work has accomplished much. We have helped mankind by the works themselves and, at the same time, we have created the necessary purchasing power to throw in the clutch to start the wheels of what we call private industry. Such expenditures on all of these works, great and small, flow out to many beneficiaries. They revive other and more remote industries and businesses, money is put in circulation, credit is expanded and the financial and industrial mechanism of America is stimulated to more and more activity.

A Splendid Symbol.

Labor makes wealth. The use of materials makes wealth. To employ workers and materials when private employment has failed is to translate into great national possessions the energy that otherwise would be wasted. Boulder Dam is a splendid symbol. The mighty waters of the Colorado were running unused to the sea. Today we translate them into a great national possession.

I might go further and suggest to you that use begets use. Such works as this serve as a means of making useful other national possessions. Vast deposits of precious metals are scattered within a short distance of where we stand today. They await the development of cheap power.

These great Government power projects will affect not only the development of agriculture and industry and mining in this section they serve, but they will also prove useful yardsticks to measure the cost of power throughout the United States. It is my belief that the Government should proceed to lay down the first yardsticks from this great power plant in the form of a State power line, assisted in its financing by the Government, and tapping the wonderful natural resources of southern Nevada. Doubtless the same policy of financial assistance to State authorities can be followed in the development of Nevada's sister State, Arizona, on the other side of the river.

With it all, with work proceeding in every one of the more than 3,000 counties in the United States and of a vastly greater number of local divisions of Government, the actual credit of Government agencies is on a stronger and safer basis than at any time in the past six years. Many States have actually improved their financial position in the past two years. Municipal tax receipts are being paid when the taxes fall due and tax arrearages are steadily declining.

Now Up to Private Firms.

It is a simple fact that Government spending is already beginning to show definite signs of its effect on consumer spending; that the putting of people to work by the Government has put other people to work through private employment, and that in 2½ years we have come to the point where private industry must bear the principal responsibility of keeping the processes of greater employment moving forward with accelerated speed.

The people of the United States are proud of Boulder Dam. With the exception of the few who are narrow visioned, the people on the Atlantic seaboard, the people in the Middle West and the people in the South must surely recognize that the national benefits which will be derived from the completion of this project will make themselves felt in every State. They know that poverty or distress in a community two thousand miles away may affect them, and that prosperity and higher standards of living across a whole continent will help them back home.

Today marks the official completion and dedication of Boulder Dam, the first of four great Government regional units. This is an engineering victory of the first order — another great achievement of American resourcefulness, skill and determination.

That is why I have the right once more to congratulate you who have created Boulder Dam and on behalf of the Nation to say to you, "Well done."

SEC Reports G. F. Baker $5,000,000 Donation in List for August.

Steel Corporation common valued at $842,375.

Baker is a director of each of these companies and it was in that capacity he was required to report any change in his stock holdings at the end of August. The report revealed that he had given away or sold the major part of his stock holdings in these companies during August. In addition to his gifts, he sold 30,000 shares of General Motors; 8,000 shares of New York Central; 4,400 shares of Pullman, and 8,070 shares of United States Steel.

Thus, at the end of the month his holdings in these companies were reported as 100 shares of General Motors, 7,100 shares of New York Central, 2,850 shares of Pullman, and 6,061 shares of United States Steel.

Baker, who is 57, has four children. He is chairman of the board of the First National Bank of New York and a director in the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., General Electric Co., New Jersey General Security Co., and Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, as well as the companies already listed.

It was estimated roughly that Baker would be required to pay the Federal Treasury taxes totaling $800,000 on his August gifts, compared with a tax of approximately $1,000,000 under the new rates becoming effective January 1. These computations are based on the assumption that his August gifts will constitute his total gifts for this fiscal year.

Sizable Return Forecast.

At the same time it was figured that the gift taxes due on the $13,000,000 of gifts made in the form of stock shares would be approximately $1,300,000, compared with $1,600,000 under the new rates. This estimate is an extremely rough one, since the size of each gift and the method of appraising stock values would enter into the computations.

But the figures indicate that the Treasury can expect a substantial return from gift taxes March 15. The only public record of such gifts is that issued by the SEC covering changes in stock ownership of directors, officers and principal owners in their companies.

2 Drivers Cleared In Traffic Deaths

Held Guiltless in Cases of Woman and Boy.

Two motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in connection with two fatal traffic accidents Saturday.

One verdict cleared ePrcy W. Griffin, 48, driver of a coal truck. Edward Winters, 15, of 1339 Columbia road, was killed, apparently while riding his bicycle and hanging onto the rear of Griffin's truck. The youngster was crushed against a parked car when Griffin made a right-hand turn into a gasoline station at Florida avenue and Porter street northeast. Griffin told the coroner's jury he did not know the boy was behind his machine.

The other motorist exonerated was Steve Hajmosi, 24, a taxi driver. His taxi allegedly struck and fatally injured Mrs. Clara Savage, 65, of 219 H street northwest, as she crossed the street in the 200 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Master of Liner Aground on Reef

Windward Passage between Cuba and Haiti.

Holland Line officers at New York said they were ignorant of the cause of the ship's grounding. Latest weather reports said the vessel was not in the storm's path. The sea today was reported calm.

Taken Off Ocean Run.

The Rotterdam is a ship of 24,149 tons and was built at Belfast in 1908. Capt. Van Dulken, a native of Rotterdam—in whom line officials expressed confidence—has been with the company for 35 years. New York offices said his crew was thoroughly experienced. A transatlantic liner, the boat was taken off that run for autumnal cruises to the West Indies.

The Ariguani was loading at Kingston and was scheduled to leave tomorrow for England. When word reached Kingston the Rotterdam was in need of help, she put out to sea. The passenger capacity of the Ariguani is only 120 persons but she has sufficient deck space to carry all of the Rotterdam's passengers to Kingston.

James Laughead, Associated Press staff photographer, who flew from Miami to Bimini, reported the island devastated but the hardy fisherfolk who live there came through without a scratch. Nearly three-fourths of the settlement's 150 houses were wrecked. The 610 inhabitants, their fishing boats gone, their wharves and homes smashed, their bakery and grocery stores wiped out, their supplies short and their water salty, still grinned. They were cut off from the outside world for 36 hours.

The colonial government at Nassau sped relief to Bimini. Acting Gov. J. H. Jarrett headed doctors and engineers preparing to go to the island to handle relief work. The hurricane was reported by Commissioner J. Malone, at Bimini, to have reached 125 miles an hour. His home was destroyed.

The Cayman Islands, about 200 miles northwest of Jamaica, suffered damage to property, the British cruiser Danae reported to Kingston, but there was no loss of life.

Jury Debates Sherman's Fate In Wife's Death life imprisonment; manslaughter, with imprisonment up to 20 years; or acquit the towering defendant.

The jury had heard the big blond defendant, a youth of 26, characterized by Prosecutor Owen A. Hoban as a philanderer of the worst sort, who carried on his illicit affair with 18-year-old Ester Hall Magill even while his wife lay home expecting their second child.

Final Arguments.

"No honest, logical mind," said the prosecutor in low, emphatic tones, "can ever arrive at any other conclusion than that this defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree."

But from William W. Buckley, bald, squat, moonfaced defense attorney, the jury heard the defendant described as a weak but goodhearted man, a devoted husband and father, whose only guilt on the tragic July night was that he fearfully abandoned his struggling wife, lest he himself drown.

While the judge gave his scholarly charge to the jurors, Sherman wore a dejected look as he sat with head resting on one of his hands. But after the jurors filed out he regained the cheery disposition that characterized him during much of the trial.

He laughed as he signed his autograph twice for Attorney Buckley—one of the lawyer's hobbies. lit up a cigarette, stretched, and made himself at home in the prisoners' pen of the rather small dome-ceilinged courtroom, determined to sit up until a verdict is returned.

Court Petition Asks Hoey Death Inquiry

West Chester, Pa., Sept. 30 (AP).—William E. Parke, Chester County district attorney, presented a petition to the county court today asking for an investigation of the death of Evelyn Hoey, Broadway musical comedy singer and friend of Henry Huddleston Rogers, 30, oil furtune heir.

Parke said in open court he wants the death of Miss Hoey investigated and also asked that the grand jurors inquire into "the conduct of certain members of the coroner's jury" and of "certain persons who were in contact with the coroner's jurors."

on strike. These workers are not affiliated with the trade union movement in America, but American longshoremen in Pacific ports refused to unload cargoes from a number of boats which had been loaded by strike breakers in Vancouver. Employers protested that the workers were violating the agreement signed by ship owners and longshoremen leaders last year when the general strike took place.

Unionists, however, remained adamant and the boats remained tied up. Employers carried their fight to McGrady and struck back, according to labor officials, by discharging 1,400 San Francisco longshoremen. Finally the dispute was submitted to an arbitrator, Judge M. C. Sloss, in San Francisco, and he ruled that the longshoremen must handle the cargoes.

The last development was a request by the I. L. A. to reopen the case before Sloss. Union officials said they had new evidence to present which might change Sloss' decision. McGrady was in telephonic communication with his agents on the Coast Sunday and the information he received was said to have prompted his departure.

Instrumental in bringing the two factions together last year under an agreement which ended the general strike, McGrady will be on hand when the accord expires on October 20. The pact was to have ended yesterday but it was extended 20 days in order to give participants additional time to discuss a new agreement without the necessity of subjecting the maritime ports to another costly strike.

Pastor at Woodstock Tenders Resignation

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Sept. 30.—The Rev. J. Mitchell Hoye, for eight years pastor of the Christian Church, has "for reasons mutually the pastor" tendered his resignaunderstood by both the church and tion, effective December 3. "In doing so," the pastor said, "I wish to express gratitude for the high privilege of having been your leader during one of the most constructive periods of your history."

During his tenure a church, costing $50,000, was erected by the congregation. It was dedicated in August, 1931. He was dean of the Community Standard Leadership Training School. During the past year he was president of the Valley Convention of Disciples of Christ, and launched the first annual Valley Youth Conference, which was held in Woodstock, July 19-21.

Woman in Red 'Public Friend,' Purvis Insists

out of the country in return for the Dillinger information. Her story won her a Federal Court habeas corpus hearing and temporary stay from deportation until October 3.

Regarding his bargain with the "Woman in Red," Purvis said:

"I informed Mrs. Sage that I would guarantee that she would receive a substantial monetary reward (she admitted receiving 05,000). I informed her that I would bring to the attention of the appropriate officials in Washington her actions in aiding the Government, and that I would recommend that some steps be taken to prevent her deportation if possible. I have done that."

"In summing up this matter," he continued, "I believe it sufficient to say that Mrs. Sage has performed an invaluable service, a service ranking among the highest of those needed by our country at that time."

In Indianapolis today, Mrs. Sage filed application with Gov. Paul McNutt for a pardon for her conviction for operating a disorderly house in Gary, Ind., presumably to clear her record in her fight against deportation.

The ebarrassing question of whether the Department of Justice officially promised to help save Mrs. Anna Sage from being deported to Rumania if she betrayed John Dillinger, remained unanswered yesterday.

A spokesman for the Department, asked to comment on the statement of Melvin Purvis in Chicago, said that, so long as the deportation proceedings against the "Woman in Red" are in court, it would be improper for Justice officials to comment.

Hollywood, Sept. 30.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN will feature a machinery ballet in his flicker, "Modern Times." Chaplin is writing the entire musical score for the picture now . . . Grace Moore was peeved with Metro and threatened not to make the flicker, "Maytime," because they reissued the picture, "A Lady's Morals," in London while she was the sensation of the city, giving the command performance . . . Peggy Fears has left the cinema village and is on her way to New York . . . At Joseph Schenck's party, Jean Harlow and Harry Richman entertained by doing a rhumba together . . . Sam Goldwyn uses his own house as a set for a scene in his flicker, "Splendor" . . . The Henry Fonda-Shirley Ross romance is getting stronger . . . When "The Children's Hour" becomes a flicker one of the school teachers will be a man and the child's lie will break up the romance between the teachers . . . Talking about "Top Hat" a supervisor said: "Whether you like it or not you've got to admit it's great entertainment."

CHAPLIN.

Cecilia Parker and Bill Henry are "Cheek to Cheek" . . . Eadie Adams is the big attraction at the Cinegrill, the latest of the Hollywood night places . . . A visitor was being escorted about the "Twentieth Century-Fox" Studio. Walking about he noticed a number of set buildings which consisted of merely false fronts. "There's certainly plenty of unfinished work here," he commented to the guide . . . The chorines, working in the musicals, have a new gag to entertain on the sets. They do "Chinese bumps." It's different from the ordinary "bumps"—and very amusing.

MARLENE DIETRICH sings an excellent song in "Desire." It is called "Whispers in the Dark" and the lyric is by Leo Robin and the tune by Frederick Hollander, who wrote "Falling in Love Again" . . . Benny Baker is in love and the gal is Margery Wellman . . . Doris Nolan was in the acting school at Fox and they gave her a chance to play a bit in a flicker. When Fox makes "The Night of January 16" into a flicker, Miss Nolan will return to that studio to play the star role . . . There were so many visitors on the set of "The Littlest Rebel" to watch Shirley Temple work that a few could be seen in the picture when the rushes were shown. Producer Buddy de Sylva would have used them as part of the mob except for the fact that it is a costume picture . . . Adrian, the designer, asks that the girls in "The Great Ziegfeld" be good-natured as well as beautiful because the costumes are so heavy to carry around . . . In the scenario of an important picture about to be filmed there is a scene in which an artist has to make a remark. And this is what is written in the script: "This speech to be filched from a Peter Arno cartoon."

A few in Hollywood are wondering about the Metro deal financing the plays to be produced by Sam Harris and Max Gordon. There is "Jubilee," which is doubtful as a flicker because it is doubtful if it could be released in England . . . Another play on the schedule is "February Hill," which couldn't be made into a picture. And another is "Pride and Prejudice," the story of which is in public domain and any company could produce it . . . Sid Silvers went to a symphony concert at the Hollywood Bowl and was very much disappointed. Silvers said: "The conductor pitched a nice game, but he got no support."

DICK POWELL and Joan Blondell out dancing together . . . Powell annoys the Warners by getting every one at that studio to say "Thanks a Million," the flicker he made for Darryl Zanuck . . . Simone, the new French importation, gave the make-up department a flash of temperament . . . Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur, who are gathering Hollywood players for their "Soak the Rich" flicker, tells the actors in their letters about their rubber diving suits and how they play solitaire in a pool with rubber cards . . . George E. Stone and Kay Linaker are romancing, as are Philip Reed and Molly Lamont . . . Gene Fowler tells the yarn about the critic who visited Thomas Carlyle, the noted author. Carlyle asked a friend what the critic had to say about him. The friend answered: "The critic was very disturbed by the fact that you use a glove for a handkerchief and said, if that be genius give me mediocrity.' . . . Carlyle was not disturbed and merely answered, 'He has his wish.'"

Irving Thalberg has a copy of every "Romeo and Juliet" script used in every noted production of this play and they were helpful in preparing the scenario which is now ready . . . Paramount made a screen test of Fred Astaire before he was signed by Radio Pictures. These screen tests are shown to all the executives and before every test there is flashed on the screen the name of the performer and some information about him . . . This was the title sheet:

Alienists to Quiz Strangler Suspect

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 30.—Kendall Hill, alleged strangler of a Baltimore taxi driver, is to be examined by alienists.

Hill, held in jail here awaiting trial next Monday, is alleged to have killed Albert Atwell, the driver, and robbed him of $4. Atwell's body was found near Havre de Grace several days after he disappeared from Baltimore.

State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb today asked the State board of mental hygiene to perform the examination on Hill. State Senator Harold Cobourn (Democrat), Cecil counsel for Hill, asked that the examination be made. Hill has been indicted by the Harford County grand jury and State police say he confessed the crime.

Culbertson On Bridge

The Raise From One to Four.

FROM the standpoint of expert play, one of the most drastic changes in the Culbertson system, model 1935-36 deals with a direct raise of an opening suit bid from 1 to 4. Previously, such a raise was construed as a strong slam try, and for once the Sims and Culbertson systems were in blissful accord. Now, its meaning is just the opposite. It is a shut-out raise, pure and simple. Far from being a slam attempt, it is an admission of weakness in honors, although sufficiently powerful distributionally to stand a sacrifice penalty double.

The requirements for a triple raise, 1 spade—4 spades, are at least five triumphs and a singleton, with 1—1½ honor-tricks in the hand. With 6-5-1-1 or 6-5-2-0 distribution, ½ honor-trick is sufficient and, if your partner is not an unqualified moron, you can dispense with honor strength altogether.

Here are three types of hands on which I would jump partner's one-spade bid to four.

♠ K-8-6-4-2	♠ 9-6-5-4-3-2	♠ J-7-6-5-3
♥ 9	♥ K-J-8-4-3	♥ 7
♦ K-8-6-5-2	♦ 2	♦ 10-6-3-2
♣ 8-6	♣ 3	♣ A-Q-6

Notice that a triple raise now is a limit bid, denying more than 1½ honor-tricks. With stronger hands one always has a double raise, 1 spade—3 spades, which is a forcing bid. The triple raise really is a big brother to a single raise, which shows adequate trump support, from ½—1½ honor-tricks, but is too weak distributionally.

It is not an easy matter to switch millions of players from a bid that, for a long time, was construed as a slam try, into a diametrically opposite inference. It was only after long and careful deliberation with the country's leading experts that we all decided to do so. Does it mean that in the past we have been wrong? Not at all.

A few years ago the 4—5 no-trump slam convention did not exist, and the slam technique was far from being adequate. With an introduction of a number of new slam inferences, the need for a triple raise as a slam try has disappeared. It is now more profitable to use this bidding situation to reenforce the group of defensive or shut-out bids.

Personally, I always have preferred to use this triple jump as a shut-out. It is a beautiful and effective weapon, like all shut-out bids, in the hands of a skillful and discriminating player.

The Side Suit First.

With a two-suited hand, there are many cases in which the side suit must be established before the trump is touched. The reason is that the trump suit is necessary to furnish entries.

The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 Sp.	2 Cl.	Pass	2 Di.
2 Ht.	Pass	2 Sp.	Pass
3 Sp.	Pass	4 Sp. (final bid)

It will be observed that South, although his hand seems strong, bids only three spades after North has shown preference for that suit. North's hand, to justify his bidding, could have been even weaker than it was.

West opened the ace and another diamond; South ruffed the second. He wisely refrained from leading trumps, but instead led to the king of hearts and back to the ace. When the queen fell, he next led a low heart. West could not gain by ruffing, and discarded a diamond. Dummy ruffed with the spade deuce, and led the queen and another spade. South drew trumps and won his ninth and tenth tricks with hearts. If he had laid down the king of spades before leading hearts, dummy would have had no low spade to lead back to the South hand after hearts were established.

Today's Question.

Question: What do you open against a no-trump bid, holding three cards to an honor in a suit your partner has bid?

Answer: From A x x, K x x, Q x x, or J x x open your lowest. From 10 x x you lead the ten.

Relief Workers Get Temporary Status in State

475 Must Take Tests for Permanent Jobs in County Boards.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 30.—Approximately 475 employes of county welfare boards in Maryland tomorrow will start work on temporary 60-day appointments, pending their Civil Service examinations.

The employes, comprising both clerical and social workers, have been paid by the Board of State Aid and Charities. They have not been under the merit system. However, the Federal law requires that all persons handling Federal funds must be under Civil Service.

For this reason all of them were separated from their jobs until they can be examined and acquire Civil Service status.

Col. Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner, said he would hold examinations as soon as possible. The tests will be open to all persons, including those not now employed by the county boards. Workers passing the examinations will be put on a list of eligibles for permanent appointment.

The Board of State Aid and Charities will hold a meeting Thursday to consider the specifications for persons to be given permanent jobs. These specifications will be sent to Col. Jones to aid him in drafting the examinations.

Ritchie Recovering From Eye Disease

Former Governor Stricken While Preparing Speech.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Sept. 30.—Former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who has been confined to his apartment for the last two weeks suffering from retinitis of the eye, today was said to be steadily recovering and probably would be out in another week or so.

Ritchie's illness resulted from intensive eye strain in the preparation of a Constitution Day speech, which he had been asked to make in Boston. He worked steadily for 14 hours on the address, only to have the eye infection prevent him from going to the Massachusetts metropolis two weeks ago.

Since then he has been under the constant care of physicians. Dr. William H. Wilmer, noted eye specialist, former director of the Wilmer Institute at John Hopkins Hospital and now practicing in Washington, examined the former Governor over the week-end, but found nothing fundamentally wrong. Ritchie has been warned that for several months he must avoid excessive reading or other activities that would strain his eyes.

Farm Cash Income Gains In 34 States.

Farmers in 34 States had larger cash receipts from sales of principal farm products plus rental and benefit payments, in the first seven months of this year than in the same period in 1934, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. States showing decreases are Maine, North Dakota, Nebraska, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona.

The total for the seven months' period was $3,313,304,000, against $2,906,341,000 in 1934, and $2,353,265,000 in 1933. The figures cover 33 leading farm products. The total for July, 1935, was $461,361,000, against $508,972,000 in July, 1934, and $457,876,000 in July, 1933. Only the North Atlantic States, as a group, showed gains this July, compared with last.

Jackson Effigy to Be on View At Celebration of Academy

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 30.—Political heads fell under President Andrew Jackson's Administration after he enunciated his famous principle, "To the victor belongs the spoils," but the President's head also fell in effigy when an indignant Whig partisan sawed off a wooden figurehead of Jackson on the U. S. Frigate Constitution's bow in a Boston harbor in 1834.

The figurehead, with the head restored, is among historic relics in the Naval Academy Museum to be viewed by visitors to the Academy's ninetieth anniversary celebration on October 10.

The Constitution had one figurehead after another. A figure of Hercules was shot away in the war with Tripoli, and Neptune, a second one, met a similar fate. In 1834 the Constitution was laid up in the Charlestown Navy Yard in Boston for repairs. President Andrew Jackson at the time visited Boston and Capt. Elliott, head of the navy yard, conceived the idea of honoring the President by putting his likeness, in the form of a figurehead, on the Constitution.

The Whigs were opposed to Jackson's doctrines and apparently Capt. Elliott's calculations of President Jackson's popularity in New England were false. In any event, news of the proposal brought stormy opposition from Boston citizens. Handbills and other propaganda were quickly distributed to the public to "save this Boston-built ship from this foul disgrace." Prominent Whigs attempted to bribe the sculptor, but to no avail. The figure of Jackson was erected on the ship's bow.

The Whig's tocsin was sounded and outraged partisans threatened the ship's safety. Two men-of-war vessels buttressed the Constitution for protection from the mob. Any traces of violence vanished with passing days until the excitement had all but subsided. Boston awoke one morning and saw that Jackson's head had been severed from its wooden torso.

According to legendary tales, Dewey, captain of a sailing vessel owned by wealthy Whig merchants, had undertaken the decapitation for a $100 wager. Dewey accomplished the deed in the height of a terrific thunderstorm and delivered the object to the exultant Whig partisans ashore. They proudly exhibited Jackson's head at Whig banquets in Boston, New York and even Philadelphia, with the figurehead a prized table decoration.

1,300 Laid Off At N. & W. Shops

Force Cut During Coal Strike Difficulties.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 30.—Approximately 1,300 Norfolk & Western Railway shops employes at various points were laid off today until difficulties created by the coal strike are cleared up, according to R. G. Henley, superintendent of motive power here.

Forces at Shaffers Crossing shops and the company's main shops here were curtailed in the roundhouse divisions, it was said. Henley estimated that about 6,500 men are employed in the various roundhouses and that close to 20 per cent of these are included in the layoff.

The layoff is expected to be temporary.

C., and also a $32,500 contract for changing over to Otis signal control gearless machines two elevators in the Colorado Building, Denver.

Things as They Are

The Best Place to Undertake Stabilization of Currency Is at Home.

By Samuel Crowther.

SCARCELY a steamer docks without some banker or industrialist briefly but profoundly sketching to the ship reporters the world's need for currency stabilization. Stabilization is an elegant word used to denote making of a piece of money into a medium of exchange instead of, as at present, a lottery ticket.

It may seem strange that making money honest should require such a vast amount of learned talk and the use of so many queer words. But it may be recalled that descriptions of perpetual motion machines are always intricate and baffling. They have to be, for the words are inetnded, not to show how the machine works, but to conceal that it cannot work.

If an individual spends more than he receives, he has to borrow to make up the deficit. If the government of a nation spends more than it receives from the people or imports more goods than it exports, the deficits also have to be made up—or concealed. The government may either borrow directly and frankly on securities or borrow indirectly and not at all frankly by issuing irredeemable promissory notes in small denominations and pretending they are money. Under the gold system, a nation issued paper money more or less as a convenience and held out to redeem its paper money in gold on demand. Gold was thus a policeman.

* * * *

THE WORLD is now off gold which means that most of the nations of the world are backing their money only with their credit—which in turn means they are backing their money with their ability to produce goods. That is all they ever had anyway. Going off gold is not of itself very important except as an evidence of inability to produce. If, due to government extravagance or import improvidence, paper money be issued without regard to the ability to produce, then the worth of the paper money becomes a gamble. Its worth is a gamble today. If one does not know the value of money, one can not know how to price and therefore how to exchange for money. That hurts trade—unless goods be actually exchanged for goods, as is being done in many quarters. The acute need is for honest money.

The need which is expressed as a need for stabilization is only the desire to arrive at some value for the paper currency of each country by agreement. But no agreement will be worth anything unless the agreeing nations balance their national budgets and arrange their foreign trade so that they will buy no more than they can pay for. Any nation doing that will have a stable currency as of course. But any nation not taking these steps can not have a stable currency—no matter what values are agreed to. Thus an international agreement would either be unnecessary or worthless.

SIR JOSIAH STAMP has recently met the realities in an address which the London Economist discusses thus:

"On the whole, Sir Josiah seems to advocate something rather nearer to the old rigidly conceived gold standard than either Sir Arthur Salter in his recent articles in the Economist or the international conference of economists held in Belgium in July—unless, of course Sir Josiah is relegating the 'ultimate' stage of his plan to a very distant future. The reconstruction of the international gold standard, Sir Josiah said, must be approached in successive stages. First, the true parities between the principal currencies, irrespective of speculative factors, must be ascertained with reasonable accuracy. Secondly, there must be a de-facto establishment of such parities (provisionally, with ample scope for adjustment during a trial period). Thirdly must come the 'closing up of the zone of exchanges into narrow ranges, with experience, and the establishment of periods of trial.' Fourthly and finally would come the institution of a complete international gold standard in which 'goods and services must be paid for by goods and services,' and 'creditor nations must not receive their debts predominantly in gold.' With these ultimate aims, and with the proposal for successive stages of advance, there will be fairly general agreement among those who realize the value of a world monetary standard, but recognize that it cannot be built in a day."

Our own country went off gold for reasons which perhaps someone knows but which never have been officially stated. We are now on a kind of second-cousin-once-removed gold basis. The exact nature of this may be known to someone, but is certainly not to the Treasury. We are also engaged in a violent campaign to buy all the gold in the world for more than it is worth, and in this we are being quite successful. Why we are doing it is again a matter of mystery.

It is suggested that we should engage in an international conference to stabilize our money—that we should agree with someone as to what our dollar is worth.

* * * *

THE UNITED STATES is the largest buyer in the world. We are the world's largest consumers of coffee, sugar, rubber and so on. If the dollar be stable, the currencies of the world are bound to be valued in terms of it.

We need not go abroad to discover the value of our dollar. If our Government continues to spend more than it receives, the buying power of the dollar is bound to decrease. If, on the other hand, we balance our own budget, quit issuing securities in order to buy useless gold, throw open our gold reserves so that anyone who wants gold for his dollars may have it, and end our money hocus-pocus, the dollar will again be sound.

An international conference could decide the value of a dollar for us. But that is something we can do for ourselves. It is not likely that our financial infants would come out of an international conference with all the clothing they wore in. That is not material. The best that we could get out of a financial conference is what we already can have without a conference. Thus we should have everything to lose and nothing to gain. The place to start real stabilization is at home.

Pageantry and Romance Mark Heroic Drama

Huge Cast Dignifies Play; New Bill at Belasco; Amusement Items.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE CRUSADES," Cecil B. De Mille's picturization, for Paramount release, of a screen play by Harold Lamb, Waldemar Young and Dudley Nichols, with musical setting by Rudolph Kopp, featuring Henry Wilcoxon, Loretta Young, Ian Keith, Katherine De Mille, C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut, C. Henry Gordon, Alan Hale, George Barbier, Montagu Love, Pedro de Cordoba, William Farnum, J. Carroll Naish, Lumsden Hare, Hobart Bosworth, Emma Dunn, Fred Malatesta, Joseph Swickard, Jason Robards and an ensemble of thousands. Directed by Mr. De Mille. At the National Theater. Previewed Monday, September 23.

Beyond the measure of any of his earlier historical pageants, Cecil B. De Mille's sweeping spectacle of "The Crusades" presents a romantic narrative commensurate with the majesty of the picture's theme and the vast scope of its execution.

Profoundly impressive in its reverential treatment of a sacred subject, "The Crusades" maintains a continuity of romantic incident as constant and as consistent as the imposing proportions of the story's development and background.

From the first introductory scene of the sacking of Jerusalem by the Saracens under the command of Saladin, Sultan of Islam, and the sale into slavery of the captured Christians, to the powerful denouement in which Richard the Lion Heart, King of England is forever barred from the gates of the Holy City, open to all who come in peace but forbidden him who attempts to pass it by might of sword, De Mille has sustained a grandeur of movement, spectacle and motive that immediately places this magnificent panorama of conquest and the grand passion among the most thoughtful and believable of his major achievements in the cinema.

Story Has Substance.

No little of the credit for the superior quality of the drama revealed in "The Crusades" devolves upon Harold Lamb, Waldemar Young and Dudley Nichols, the authors. They contrived a screen play that shrewdly blends the gradiose effects of the twelfth century pilgrimages of all Europe to rescue the Tomb of Christ from the clutches of the infidel with a love story between Richard, of England, and Princess Berengaria, of Navarre, that is of dignified and almost poetic beauty.

The gathering of the hosts under the Kings of Christendom, to wrest the Holy Sepulchre from the unbelievers; the embarkation at Marseille for the hazardous trip to Palestine, the marriage of Berengaria to Richard, with his sword serving as his proxy at the altar; the council of the kings at the gates of Acre, the thundering siege of the impregnable walls of that beleaguered city, the magnanimity of Saladin in restoring the captive Berengaria to her royal husband, with his banishment forever from Jerusalem as the price of that concession; the intrigue, antagonisms and perfidy inspired by Alice, sister of Phillippe, King of France, are dramatic high lights of a screen drama of such far-flung ramifications that it can not be comprehensively outlined within the compass of a brief midnight review. It is heroic in inspiration, conception and the superb artstry of its pictorial splendor. It gains added impetus from a fine musical score.

Without a cast of exceptional capability the full power and sweep of this drama of the ages could not have been realized. The number of principals assigned to roles of importance in the development of the cumulative action of the play precludes individual consideration of all those whose work merits commendation.

Principals Bear Heavy Burdens.

Henry Wilcoxon, the Marc Antony of "Cleopatra," is indeed a lion-hearted Richard, felling his personal adversaries with crushing blows of his fist and humbling nations by the might of his hand-forged sword. If his performance falls a trifle short of the commanding power the role demands in some of its climacteric scenes, his gentler moments with the wife he first despised and then came to love with an overwhelming devotion, more than compensate for the deficiency.

Loretta Young, as Berengaria, presents an ingenous study of bewildered girlhood, caught up in a maelstrom of events that she cannot stem although it is she who unwittingly controls them in the end. Miss Young scores one of her major successes under De Mille guidance and in many scenes is pitted against Katherine De Mille, in the sinster role of Alice of France. Ian Keith is an ideal selection for the swarthy sultan of the Saracens and C. Henry Gordon is well found in the role of Philippe, the French king whose plots were foiled by Richard.

On the lighter side, Alan Hale, as Richard's minstrel, contributes a splendid comedy characterization as an atmospheric relief from the drama's more serious central theme. C. Aubrey Smith, as the holy hermit, who marshals the armies of the world to the service of the cross, is a persuasive patriarch, and Joseph Schildkraut, in the comparatively minor role of Conrad of Montferrat, elevates an obscure character to a place of eminence by the sheer power of his reading.

Scores Add to Effect.

The numerous others whose efforts add appreciably to the rounded perfection of a memorable addition to the list of the cinema's superproductions comprise the list contained in the small-type paragraph preceding these impressions. Each is entitled to the recognition that belongs to valuable service.

A large and representative first-night audience last evening paid the tribute of rapt and silent attention to a picture that can not fail to command interest and admiration.

"The Crusades" was alone on the slightly more than two-hour program, except for the Paramount newsreel, which preceded its screening.

It will be presented twice daily throughout the week, with all seats reserved.

First Sword of Mighty Pilgrimage

Having won his spurs in the role of Marc Antony in Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular production of "Cleopatra," Henry Wilcoxen now is cast in the heroic role of Richard the Lion Hart in the same producer-director's screen pageant of "The Crusades." With Loretta Young in the principal feminine role of Berengaria and a cast and ensemble of thousands in support, "The Crusades" opened the season at the National Theater last night, where it will be presented twice daily throughout the week—all seats reserved.

Belasco

"THE CLAIRVOYANT." Gaumont-British picturization of a story by Ernst Lother, starring Claude Rains, with Fay Wray, Jane Baxter, Mary Clare, Denier Warren and Donald Calthrop. Directed by Maurice Elvey. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

Telepathic thought transference forms the basis of this odd, but eminently successful, blending of romanticism and the occult.

The titular figure in a drama of swift movement, sustained suspense and sensational climaxes is first encountered as a cheap charlatan of the music halls, presenting the familiar fake "mind-reading act" in which he is blindfolded on the stage and identifies objects submitted to his wife and professional partner as she passes up and down the aisles soliciting tests of the marvelous powers of the mighty Maximus.

Losing her way momentarily in an attempt to reach the balcony level to regale the occupants of the cheaper seats with the miracles of Maximus' chicanery, Rene precipitates a crisis in the performance of the act. It is revealed that Maximus is possessed of no unusual power whatsoever and catastrophe stares him in the face, when, of a sudden, he espies an attractive young woman in a box with her eyes riveted upon his, and slowly there dawns upon him a consciousness of a power which he has never before experienced.

Under Spell of a Beauty.

Under the spell of this strange influence, he forecasts the wreck of the Manchester Express, in which many lives are lost; he picks the winner of the Derby, an outsider in the wagering, quoted at 100 to 1; he foretells another hideous loss of life in a tunnel that is being bored under a river. His fame spreads and he is made official forecaster of events for the powerful Lodnon daily owned by the father of the girl who was in the box at the theater. Always she is near when he becomes clairvoyant and unerringly gazes into the future. It becomes apparent to his associates, particularly to his wife, that he is under the strange spell of this beautiful young Christine Shawn, who has fallen desperately and hopelessly in love with him.

It becomes, then, a struggle for possession of the man and dominance over his mind between his wife and the woman in whom all of his power reposes. It is not until he is arraigned in court on a murder charge for having caused the tunnel disaster by pleading with the sand-hogs not to go down into the tube and thus so unnerving them that bungling of their job was inevitable that he can prove the genuineness of his gift. Again Christine is in the courtroom and once more Maximus is able to pierce the veil and declare to the court that the 110 men supposedly dead in the blocked tunnel are alive and at that moment emerging from their prison of living death. Climax, denouement and quick curtain!

Is Flexible Theme.

There can be little carping with this picture's dramatic narrative, since telepathy is a moot question among the savants and a playwright may do with it what he wishes without fear of dangerous contradiction. To those who believe in thought transference, "The Clairvoyant," will present an interesting, thrilling and convincing story. The skeptics will perceive in its climacteric developments either the long arm of coincidence or the author's deliberate adaptation of the theory of telepathy to the purposes of his plot.

Whatever the individual viewpoint, there can be only unanimity on the point that the picture is extremely well staged, directed and photographed and that it is acted with fine skill by those cast in the pivotal roles. Claude Rains is peculiarly equipped by appearance, voice and past experience for precisely this sort of thing. His portrayal of the title role is to be ranked with the best contributions he has made to the cinema, and Fay Wray, as Rene, his wife, plays with equal sincerity and warmth. Jane Baxter quite fulfills the requirements of the play's charming "menace." The other members of the cast are virtually unknown to American audiences, although the work of Mary Clare, Ben Field, Denier Warren and Donald Calthrop deserves commendatory mention.

A Fine Auxiliary Bill.

The supplementary attractions of the bill which opened with a late preview showing last Friday night are almost as important as the major feature and are considerably more numerous than usual. They consist of a Terrytoon comedy, "Chain Letters," that has rather passed its first flush of timeliness; "Mother Melodies," a song tribute to all mothers, with poetic text read by David Ross and organ accompaniment by Lew White; a new release in the Port o' Call series, "The Last Resort;" "Filming the Great," a new issue in the "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman" series; "The Paradise of the Pacific" and the new issue of the Pathe News.

Out of this generous array, "The Last Resort," "Filming the Great" and "Paradise of the Pacific" will engage primary attention. The first is an interesting tour of Djibouti, in French Somaliland, on the East African Coast; "Paradise of the Pacific" is a film tour to and through portions of the Hawaiian Islands and "Filming the Great" is precisely that, affording closeups of practically every monarch, president, dictator and world celebrity that has appeared in the newsreels during the past decade.

Altogether, a program worthy of any discriminating picturegoer's time and money—especially with a cup of coffee and a cigarette thrown in, with the compliments of the management!

Addenda.

Claudette Colbert, supported by Melvyn Douglas, Michael Bartlett and little Edith Fellows, in "She Married Her Boss," will supplant the current attraction, "Little Big Shot," starring Sybil Jason, at the Metropolitan tomorrow. . . . On Wednesday, Edward Arnold in the title role of "Diamond Jim," a biographical drama based on the life of James Buchanan Brady"—and thanks to you, Mr. Meakin, for the book—will succeed "Top Hat" at RKO-Keith's . . . Roberts, people's counsel; Thomas Burke, chief of the Motion Picture Specialties Division of the Department of Commerce, and Harry Evans, New York film critic and publisher, will be the speakers at today's luncheon of the Variety Club, at the Willard . . . The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

RESOLUTIONS urging extension of the merit system and deploring the alleged continued large increases in excepted positions in the Government service were adopted at the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada which just adjourned at Milwaukee.

BAKER.

This was reported last night by Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, who attended the assembly.

Mr. Steward pointed out that for many years the N. F. F. E. has been the only employe organization affiliated with the Civil Service Assembly. However, he said, at the Milwaukee meeting, the New Jersey Civil Service Association, composed of State employes, was admitted to membership.

Roper Promises Probe.

Secretary Roper yesterday assured the American Federation of Government Employes that an investigation would be made into the death of five lodge members on the Lighthouse Tender Tulip, off Roamer Shoal, September 16.

New York Lodge, No. 92, has contended that boats used in this service were often loaded so heavily that they had little freeboard, that possibly they were of unsuitable design, that no modern life preservers and an insufficient number of any kind of life preservers were available at the time, and the tender Tulip's hoisting gear was not working properly. It was also assert that on the following day there was an accident involving the lightship Ambrose which probably was due to a long-existing mechanical defect.

Soil Conservation Service.

Miss Betty Eidhammer (F), is planning a month's vacation in England. James Dillon, of Meridian, Miss., recently accepted an appointment in ECW Division.

Miss Alice Price, (C), Agriculture, announces another picnic is being planned by her riding club, which meets every Wednesday at 5:30 p. m.

WORD has been received from the office of the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry that unskilled laborers on the Animal Husbandry Farm at Beltsville will be granted accumulated leave dating back to April, 1932, Elmer W. Brown (P), adjustment committee chairman of AFGE Lodge, No. 125, said last night.

Mr. Brown also revealed that he has been given "reliable assurance" that all leave privilege difficulties will be ironed out at once, and that a real step forward had been registered in the lodge's battle for fair treatment of farm employes who have been struggling for leave privileges and equal pay for equal work. The Civil Service Commission, he said, is preparing a system of classification for the so-called "unskilled laborers" at the Beltsville Research Center, few of whom are doing anything in the line of duty that cannot be considered as eligible for classification.

Lodge No. 125 is planning a dance to be given this month, receipts from which will be used to finance the lodge's activities for the coming year.

Bruce W. Baughman (F), Commerce, has obtained a patent for a valve spring compressor and lock which is adapted for aeroplane engine use where the engine has overhead rocker arms.

Federal Bridge League.

Play in the 1935-36 season of the Federal Bridge League will get under way at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest tonight. Paul E. Golden (F), Bureau of Standards, league president and scorer, announces.

Mr. Golden urges all team captains to be present at 7:30 p. m. in order that registration and preliminaries can be settled in time for play to begin promptly at 8:15 p. m. League officers indicate that a record number of teams will be registered to compete for the trophy awarded each year by Luther C. Steward, president, National Federation of Federal Employes.

Re-settlement Administration pay checks are a day late this month. No reason for the delay was given on the memoranda circulated among the employes.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, "Greatest Vaudeville Show on Earth;" screen, Laurel and Hardy in "Bonnie Scotland"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Clark Gable, Loretta Young and Jack Oakie in "Call of the Wild"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Edmund Lowe, Karen Morley and Paul Cavanaugh in "Thunder in the Night").

War Department Local, No. 261, National Federation of Federal Employes, will meet at 8 p. m. today at the District headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, to hear reports on the convention and to nominate officers for 1936.

Second Resettlement Dance.

Finance Division, Resettlement Administration, will be host at its second dance of the season October 19 at the Shoreham Hotel. Several novel entertainment features are being planned, according to C. W. Swan (C), general chairman in charge of arrangements.

Record Enrollment.

A Kansas Experiment.

An analysis of the social security act has come to hand bearing the imprint of the Kansas Legislative Council. The report is designed primarily for use by the State Legislature in adapting the Federal program to the needs of Kansas. But it also demonstrates the service a bipartisan group, working with a competent research staff, can offer to lawmakers bewildered by the intricacies of present day problems.

The council, comprised of senators and representatives from both parties, functions under authorization of the Legislature. Its purpose is to supplement and assist the interim committees charged with dissection of abstruse legislative problems. Recently, by virtue of a small grant from the Spelman Fund, a research staff was made available to it. In the five months following this addition, data on 42 items have been presented to the council for consideration in its recommendations to the Legislature. Moreover during the past session, the staff responded to 52 inquiries made by members from both houses.

Typical of the reports compiled by the council are those treating the sales tax, State police, old-age pensions and standardization of accounting methods. A majority of the council proposals were given favorable consideration by at least one house. Findings and recommendations of the council served as the basis for debates both on the floor and in committee. In several instances it is agreed that the preliminary work of the council hastened the passage of bills by as much as one or two sessions.

The council is described as an experiment, but if observers may be trusted it promises to develop into a permanent institution. Since its appearance on the Topeka scene, an increased unwillingness has been noted to decide policy until facts might be secured. Further, an increased demand for background material has become apparent. Careful consideration of the council's reports is now taken as a matter of course, not only by members of the Legislature but also by interested groups and the public generally. In sum, the experiment bids fair to forward solution of the problem of equipping local lawmakers with a factually secure basis for their deliberations.

Trade With China.

Some highly interesting facts about China's import and export trade and her position as a potential market for European and American goods are contained in a recent publication of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The study entitled "Where China Buys and Sells" has been prepared by Charles K. Moser, chief of the Far Eastern section of the bureau and a recognized authority on Asiatic commerce.

Unlike those optimistic silver-bloc Senators who painted glowing pictures of the opportunities open to American business in trade with a nation of 450,000,000 people, Mr. Moser concludes that China's purchases abroad, which reached a maximum in 1931, "very nearly approached the limit of her potential buying capacity, not only now but for some years to come." Evidence to support this statement is supplied by estimates of per capita income which reveal the extreme poverty of the people. For example, first hand investigations show that the average per capita income of the Chinese masses is equivalent to about $9 in American currency. Living from hand to mouth, the rural inhabitants must spend most of their limited income for food, leaving little for other purposes. Hence, even in 1931 imports amounted to less than $1.40 per capita.

Low purchasing power is not the only cause of China's limited potentialities as a market for foreign goods. Inadequate means of transportation, illiteracy, and language difficulties are also serious obstacles to trading in the interior. Political strife and administrative uncertainty make it hard for merchants to carry on business. Then, too, China is a country which is highly self-sufficient, despite its backwardness in developing modern factories. Primitive workshops, and cottage industries are said to supply about 70 per cent of the industrial output. Even if these cottage industries give place to large scale manufacturing, it is highly probable that many articles now imported will be domestically produced.

Although industrial advance will by degrees add to the wealth of China and increase her ability to buy goods abroad, Mr. Moser warns against basing exaggerated hopes for future trade expansion upon the mere existence of a tremendous population. These salutary warnings are not intended to indicate that there is no prospect of expanding our dealings with the Chinese. On the contrary, emphasis is placed upon the economic progress that has occurred during the past 25 years in spite of chaotic conditions. Instead of being a counsel of despair, this report is an impartial, informed statement designed to correct absurd misconceptions that have arisen concerning potential markets in China.

"The World Is Not Static."

In retrospect it is easy to see that a serious blunder in the drafting of the League of Nation's Covenant was the separation of the two articles now found therein as numbers 10 and 19.

Article 10, which had much to do with keeping the United States from League membership, is the one under which "the members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the League." Article 19 provides that:

> The Assembly may from time to time advise the reconsideration by members of the League of treaties which have become inapplicable and the consideration of international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world.

In the early drafts of the Covenant these two provisions were actually, as they are still logically, complementary parts of a single well-proportioned article. These early drafts, in fact, made collective action against an aggressor clearly contingent upon coincident procedure to revise treaty settlements which encourage aggression. The desirable balance between the principle of treaty guarantee and treaty revision was clearly emphasized by the italicized phrase in a rejected British draft which read:

> The states members of the League undertake, subject to the provisions of Article 22 (now Article 19), to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all states members of the League.

The paramount significance of the British note on League policy, which Sir Samuel Hoare has now delivered to the French Ambassador in London, is that it seeks to reestablish that proportion which was lost when what are now Articles 10 and 19 were separated in the League Covenant. The current British note seeks to emphasize treaty revision as the essential counterpart of treaty guarantee. It points out that no permanent peace can be achieved merely by acclaiming the sanctity of settlements which are as disadvantageous to some nations as they are agreeable to others. In the words of Sir Samuel Hoare: "Elasticity is a part of security and every member of the League must recognize, as the Covenant (Article 19) itself recognizes, that the world is not static."

This British note, in other words, is directed as much to Italy and Germany as to France. It tells Mussolini that if he will hold his hand from aggression in Ethiopia, the British will work under the League aegis for some orderly rearrangement giving sympathetic consideration to Italian expansionist aspirations. Similarly the note tells the Germans—particularly by stressing the difference between "a positive act of unprovoked aggression" and "a negative act of failure to fulfill terms of a treaty"—that Great Britain regards the League as something much more than an instrumentality to uphold the Treaty of Versailles.

The British note will therefore fail to give the French that assurance of automatic support against Germany which Paris desires before lining up solidly with Britain against Italy. But it does provide the more constructive assurance that Great Britain will work for a fundamental solution, rather than a time-serving evasion, of the larger struggle between satisfied and dispossessed nations which really underlies the Ethiopian dispute.

Few would predict that this lead toward a rational solution of the basic problem will of itself dispel the present electric atmosphere. But it is decidedly and appealingly in line with the original conception of the League of Nations. It is, in fact, a practical extension of the remarks made by President Wilson to the Peace Conference on January 25, 1919, when he said:

> Settlements may be temporary, but the actions of the nations in the interests of peace and justice must be permanent. We can set up permanent processes. We may not be able to set up permanent decisions.

Not Even Speedy.

In his budget message President Roosevelt admitted that the work-relief program, "designed to put 3,500,000 men on useful work," is going more slowly than he had hoped. Unfortunately disappointment with the results of this undertaking do not seem to have created doubts of its wisdom or feasibility. The President is still resolved to carry out the program, spending billions on projects that afford employment for a maximum number of men at a minimum overhead cost.

Consequently Mr. Hopkins and local WPA administrators will be forced to continue their feverish hunt for jobs to employ tens of thousands of idle men for whom useful and suitable occupations are non-existent. Since the wastes and losses of this type of work relief increase with the speed of execution, many citizens do not share the President's disappointment that progress has not been greater.

Make-believe tasks have to be invented and two or three or more men have to be assigned to work that a single individual could easily do. Thinly disguised relief payments of this sort are little if at all better than direct doles. Indeed they may be more demoralizing to the recipient and they undoubtedly cost the taxpayers more.

Instead of relying upon this haphazard system to relieve unemployment, the President might have used the funds at his disposal to carry out carefully-planned long-range projects that would have created really useful employment while indirectly providing much work by stimulating demands for materials and supplies furnished by the basic industries. Even in theory the Hopkins program has nothing to commend it as an alternative except its promised ability to get quick results. Now it has fallen down lamentably even in that respect.

Remember Mr. Micawber.

The President's budget statement is an obvious attempt to answer critics of the Administration's spending program, and as such reveals a growing concern with the fiscal problems created by lavish outlays for relief. This evidence of some reflection on the budgetary situation is all to the good, but as an exposition of the Government's financial position the statement is unduly optimistic and in certain respects highly evasive.

As on former occasions, the President tries to minimize the seriousness of the deficits incurred and in prospect by pointing out that they would have been much larger if budgetary estimates had been reliable. While this may be an argument in favor of deliberate exaggeration in the estimates, it is a decidedly poor defense against critics of deficit financing. The public is expected to rejoice, for instance, because actual outlays during the past fiscal year were about $1,200,000,000 lower than the January budget estimates. A further cause of jubilation is found in the downward revision of estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year to approximately $7,750,000,000, as contrasted with the budget figure of $8,500,000,000.

If these reductions, actual and in prospect, were the result of any definite retrenchment policy, there would be good reason for feeling encouraged. But there has been no change of program, only a fulfillment of predictions that the Government would find it virtually impossible to spend so many billions within the time allotted.

The upward revision of estimated receipts from taxation in 1935-36, due to the improved business outlook, is most welcome, and is calculated to make a substantial dent in the anticipated deficit. Nevertheless, even with income rising and outgo falling below estimates, the $3,000,000,000 deficit of last year will, it is believed, be almost equalled. Of course a net deficit of $2,700,000,000 is less appalling than the budgetted deficit, which approximated $4,000,000,000 net. It remains, however, a sum difficult to cover from income sources. Yet the President says "it is clear to me that the Federal Government, under provisions of present tax schedules, will not need new taxes or increased rates in existing taxes to meet the expense of its annual operations and to retire its public debt."

The revised estimate, of the deficit with provision made for debt retirement, amounts to nearly $3,300,000,000 for the current year. How long will it be before business recovery will bring about the predicted "speedy decline" in emergency expenditures and raise revenues to a point at which this great deficit will disappear? The President carefully does not set a date for budget balancing. We are merely left to hope that better times will solve the fiscal problem without the need of positive action.

Such undue optimism, in view of the very moderate improvement in budgetary prospects, is calculated to destroy the good impression produced by the emphasis placed upon the necessity of economizing. It is highly important that the public should understand that passive waiting for a return to prosperity is a dangerous kind of inaction.

We need increased income from taxation just as much today as we did during the lifetime of Huey Long, when the President was urging Congress to pass a new taxation measure, ostensibly for purposes of revenue. We also need a constructive retrenchment program that will faciliate the decline in emergency spending. We could have gone to Wilkins Micawber for pleasant assurances that normal business "will produce revenues adequate for all essential purposes."

Singing In The Tub.

It seemed pretty silly several weeks ago when New York City decided that its milkmen's horses should be shod with noiseless shoes. There is much to be said in favor of complete quiet in the early morning hours. On the other hand, the old familiar clop-clop of horses' hoofs in the distance at dawn is a pleasant part of waking, stretching, and turning over again. At any rate, the horses won't mind the change and they're the ones most concerned. That's more than can be said for Manhattan's most recent noise abatement plan.

This latest attack on the Great Unquiet proposes, perish the thought, to abolish bathtub singing! This despite the fact that Chicago psychologists assert such a prohibition would lead either to disastrous inhibitions or to a bathless population.

Lives there a man with soul so dead who never to himself has synchronized a splash and a sonata. But whether you're a cold-water coloratura or a tepid tenor is not the point. The question is whether the soul is to be restricted in almost the only part of modern civilization where it can be alone. Preservation of that pre-prandial expansion is probably more important than amendment of the Constitution. Personally, we thought this morning, as we reached for the soap, that Tibbett would soon have to look to his laurels.

Correction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my letter published September 23, I quoted official police statistics (in connection with arrests of intoxicated drivers) from 323 cities having an aggregate population of 36,000,000.

In your column this population figure is given as 6,000,000.

I will appreciate it if you can make some correction in connection with that typographical error, since the information as it appeared in The Post is not correct.

"What Is Our Portion?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The determined and sustained efforts of some eminent official Washingtonians have had the desired result of bringing to a close the transient program in the District of Columbia. The question now uppermost in the minds of approximately 2,000 homeless, single men in Washington, and 250,000 in the United States is, "Shall we beg, or shall we steal?" There is no question of seeking employment, inasmuch as thousands of Washingtonians cannot find work in their home town. We know full well that the PWA has no intention whatsoever of absorbing us in their program, hence we are faced with the above alternatives.

"Return to your homes" is the cry of the magisterial officials, who sit in frowning judgment on the transient. "Impossible," returns the transient. "The economic structure of the United States for a century has created a demand for a migratory working class. These men built the transportation systems of the West. They have harvested the wheat and corn crops for generations, they have built Roosevelt Dam, Boulder Dam, Moffat Tunnel, Cascade Tunnel, the levees of the Mississippi, and thousands were in demand for years in the maintenance work of the great railroads of the entire country. Even in these dull times the Southern Pacific Railroad is employing more than 5,000 migratory workers, but that is only a drop in the bucket, and these men, working on "extra gangs," will be thrown out of work in the next month. Formerly we could go from one job to another, following seasonal employment, South in the winter, North in the summer. Now, wherever we go, only a few of us are fortunate enough to find work."

Recognizing the responsibility owed this group of citizens, the Government opened the transient bureaus, staffed them, slowly but surely with people of intelligence and understanding of the problem presented by these men, so necessary to the building of this country, and extended them, through these competent staff members, the necessities of life. It is true that some people, not the real migratory workers, have seeped into the bureaus, but is not such also the case with the local relief set-up? Now, due to the efforts of these self-righteous people, whose chief contribution to the building of America seems to be the handing down of petty opinions and decisions, this structure, so finely staffed, so efficiently operated and so noble in purpose, is to be destroyed.

Again, the question, "Shall we beg, or shall we steal?" Our answer is ready. Men who build railroads, work 12 and 14 hours a day in the wheat harvest fields, wheelbarrows of concrete along a narrow plank at dizzying heights to the top of a great dam, and laugh and joke at their work are not men to lie down and starve. We shall never beg. It is not part of our heritage. But we shall eat.

Two Sides Of The Noise Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with much interest the letter written recently about noises in Washington bothering people. I wonder if these people stop to think what a city would be like without any noise whatsoever.

In my estimation, the blimp does not make as much noise as the airplanes, but would they stop all airplane traffic? The blimp is a very spectacular thing sailing through the air and adds greatly to the beauty of the skies.

About children riding skooters and roller skates—what do these people want? Do they want the children to sit and twiddle their thumbs? I have three children—12 years, 9 years and 3. The two older children have roller skates and use them, but they do not skate after dark, at night.

If they want to stop unnecessary noises why don't they start in on dogs which bark all night instead of on children who get their much needed exercise and recreation on roller skates and skooters?

I wonder how many of the people who are complaining are old maids and bachelors, or childless couples? Have they forgotten that they were young once themselves?

Why don't they go out in the backwoods someplace to live instead of a city, but perhaps the crickets or swaying of the trees would bother them even there. I wonder how many people are really and truly aware of the many noises. If they think this city is noisy, they should live in New York City or Boston.

All I say is, go ahead and eliminate some of the unnecessary noises, but please don't start in on children or air traffic.

MRS. DOROTHY ROOT.

Washington, Sept. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to second those who are protesting against the noisy medium of advertising which continually snarls above our roofs all day long and far into the night. I know of no form of the art of commercial ballyhoo which creates so much active ill will against the company which foots the bills. I have talked with many people about this craft which hovers roaring over my house every ten minutes and I find them without exception actively indignant against the nerve-shattering instrusion from the skies.

I also know that at times it flies over restricted areas and I am sure that there must be some District regulation by which it could be barred from annoying us as a menace to health and a public nuisance. Surely there must be some member of the District government with backbone enough to fight a noisy nuisance and a very real menace to health. Ground the blimp!

Unconstitutional Desires.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to take President Franklin D. Roosevelt to task in this contribution to your paper.

An editorial entitled "Must" in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post says that President Roosevelt prefers to call his conglomeration of "must" bills and measures he placed before Congress "desirable legislation." Desirable may be a nicer word to use in reference to his relief legislation, but "desirable legislation" is a fallacious phrase, and in using the phrase in connection with his program, Mr. Roosevelt is taking too much for granted. A number of his bills are open to question as to their legality, and, consequently, are susceptible to the fate of the defunct NRA. And any bill that reads contrary to the Constitution of the United States certainly should not and will not be acceptable as a desirable law by the sound thinkers and believers in sound government and economic policies.

Apparently, however, Mr. Roosevelt cannot see himself returning to traditional governmental procedure, with Congress wielding most of the power. Overzealous with dictatorial power, money and fighting materials he is allowing his patriotic duty to his country and his countrymen to slide into the shadowy background of demagoguery. AARON H. BRADBURY.

Defending Defense Highway.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Such scathing remarks about poor Defense highway as appear in some of your readers' letters! Is any type of road safe for drivers who think they are the only people privileged to use it? I have driven in Washington for years and the past year have driven Landover road, Md., every day, including a mile or so on Defense highway.

I have used Defense highway a great deal going to the Maryland beaches and am quite familiar with it. My only worry is the fellow who exceeds the speed limit and uses my side of the road in making a curve. This is the real hazard. No curve would be safe for such a driver, though there are a few curves in this highway that might be straightened somewhat. What would these same drivers do out West in the mountainous sections, or on some of the right-angle curves I have found in Pennsylvania?

Defense highway could be improved, but sane drivers will make it a safe road now just as well as if it were 50 feet wide and straight ahead. It is not excessively narrow—try Landover road if you think so. If 40 miles an hour cannot be safely driven, make it 35.

A Virtue Of Kings.

Post Office, Tuesday.

SAID G. W. Custis-Calvert: "New York hates Washington. Manhattan used to be America's money capital; now all Wall Street has to listen to a couple of blocks on Pennsylvania avenue. Manhattan used to lead the Nation by the nose; now Washington propels the people by constant pressure from the rear. New York retaliates by every devilish device imaginable."

G. W. is one of the most recently ignited candles in Washington's candelabrum—has had two stories in the pulps and is working on an historical drama in blank verse. Therefore, he is eager to elevate the movies. Although altruistic, he admits he wouldn't scorn an honorarium; he is passing his spare time—he hasn't much of any other kind—at the Skyland CCC.

"The movies," said he, "need a Better Motive. I've decided upon their humor as my first objective: screen-farce should be raised to real comedy. And what is real comedy if not the teaching of a lesson—some homely virtue decked in the rich habiliments of laughter?

"I heard that Hal Roach was just now in New York: the producer responsible for Harold Lloyd, for Laurel and Hardy. I also heard that Mr. Roach made a hobby of punctuality. So I wrote him, suggesting a high comedy on that subject. He invited me to dine with him in his hotel at 7 p. m. a week ago last Saturday.

"I fanned the camphor out of my dinner clothes, put them and my scenario in my suit case and took the 1 p. m. train, reaching New York at 5:15.

"I'd be offered a cocktail; it musn't affect me: at the station lunch counter I built up resistance with a sandwich and coffee. I had the station barber shave me. I went to one of the station washrooms and dressed just as carefully as you can dress in a 4x4 washroom with your studs rolling under the partitions into the neighboring compartments. There wasn't any cheval glass, but the colored attendant assured me I had arranged my suspenders to the correct sixteenth of an inch.

"But the hotel was nearer than I'd supposed. When my taxi's chauffeur switched on his light to collect the fare, my watch showed 15 minutes to go. My host was a punctuality pundit; my scenario taught the virtue of punctuality. I must exemplify my precept—I would have myself announced, not at 6:55, or yet 7:05, but precisely on the hour.

"So I strolled around the block. And I still had ten minutes to wait! I sat down in the lobby. I looked in at the checkroom—though there's never anything to see in a checkroom except hats and coats . . .

"I even studdied the paintings on the wall of the lobby—and you know what hotel-lobby paintings can be!

"At last, my wristwatch crawled to 1 minute before 7. I engaged the room-clerk in trivial conversation for 59 seconds. 'Now,' I requested, 'Kindly call Mr. Hal Roach's suite and announce Mr. G. W. Custis-Calvert, of Washington.'

"To my very grave I shall carry the clerk's expression of scornful amazement. 'Who?' he asked.

"'Mr. G. W. Custis-Calvert,' I repeated distinctly. 'Of Washington. To see Mr. Hal Roach.'

"'So you're the guy?' said the clerk. Yes, he called me a guy. 'Well, Mr. Roach went out 15 minutes ago.'

"'Out?' I couldn't believe my ears. 'Where?'

"'Some theater or other.'

"'But that's incredible!'

"'It's so, anyway,' the clerk assured me—still with his opprobrious stare. 'Mr. Roach said he'd waited for you longer'n he'd ever waited for anybody: 40 minutes. And I could see he was good and tired of it.'

"At this, I recovered, momentarily, my firmness: there is always strength in the consciousness of right. 'My dear fellow,' I explained, 'I tell you I am Mr. G. W. Custis-Calvert, of Washington: Mr. Roach made a specific engagement with me for 7 p. m.'

"Nevertheless, that clerk replied in the spirit of spite which only a citizen of his city can entertain for a citizen of ours. 'I'll tell the world you're from Washington, Mr. Calvert-Custis,' said he—of course intentionally contorting my name. 'But this is New York. I've heard Washington never goes on Daylight Saving Time—why haven't you heard N'York doesn't go back to Standard till September 28?'"

"It is thus," said G. W., "that Manhattan revenges itself on the Capital of its country. Wasn't it Louis XVIII—not Louis XIV—who called punctuality the politeness of kings? Yet I had to come back here with my scenario in my pocket! I took the 8 p. m. train — Eastern Standard Time.

"Late? Why, really, I had been a week ahead of schedule! . . .

"Now," said G. W., "let me read you my scenario—and you'll see what New York's Washington-phobia made Mr. Roach miss."

Fair Enough

Ethiopia Needs Civilising.

New York, Sept. 30.

THE description of the ceremonies marking the end of the rainy season in Addis Ababa are such that I am beginning to believe that the Italians, after all, do have a mission to carry the light—perhaps the torchlight—of civilization to the primitive brothers of a backward country. Haile Selassie, who has the effrontery to call himself the King of Kings, sat on a musical-comedy throne, wearing a golden collar and a Graustark golden sword, and fanatical warriors groveled in the mud before him, promising to die for him if need be. A degrading spectacle to be sure.

Priests were observed among the troops, wily fakers, who practice primitive rites and lead the soldiers to believe that they are able to intercede for them with God.

From all this it becomes apparent that the Ethiopians are in need of civilization. They are being imposed upon in their ignorance, and it seems to be the duty of the civilized peoples to enlighten them for their own good so that they can be like us.

• • • •

NOWHERE in the civilized world would you find a king attired in the masquerade ball regalia of Haile Selassie. George the Fifth of England, Ireland and the Indian Empire; Carol, by the grace of God, King of Rumania, and Victor Emmanuel of Italy, are majestic and authentic kings who rule by the command of the real God. The Emperor of Japan claims to the descendant of God. The Japanese are slightly in error on this point and deserve to be corrected by force of arms for their own good. But the civilized peoples are pretty busy at the moment upholdin" civilization among themselves and the matter of Japanese error will have to be put on file for attention presently. The Ethiopians, by a lucky break, and thanks to the primitive state of their military and political affairs, get first chance to be set right. Hallelujah!

Haile Selassie also lays claim to having received his appointment from God; but the adsurdity of that is apparent when one looks at the pictures of his court ceremonies. Some of his subjects go about in nightshirts, and even his uniformed troops are barefoot. Moreover, the religious rites of his priests are barbaric by contrast with the fine, rational ceremonies in which the civilized peoples address themselves to the One True Maker. The Ethiopian clergy burn fires and sing chants, deliver anthems and lay claim to special consideration from Heaven. This the civilized clergy would never do.

It is sad that these barbarians should be permitted to waste their adulation in crazy ceremonies on a king who is really not a king, but merely a slightly superior wild man, when they might give intelligent homage to a real one.

• • • •

GEORGE V of England and so forth would be worthy of any man's homage, or Victor Emmanuel of Italy. They do not go out in ridiculous trappings, although the Ethiopians, in their ignorance, might think King George's costume rather comic when he appears in kilts with his Highlanders or sits on his throne with the crown on his head and the royal robes about him.

Certainly warriors should never grovel in the mud and pledge away their lives to their monarch. It is another thing when a civilized general kneels on a plush cushion before a genuine regal throne to be touched on the shoulder with the flat of the king's blade and dubbed Sir Knight, consecrating his life to the destruction of the king's enemies and the propagation of civilization in the dark countries. That is not groveling. There is a fine distinction there.

There is a difference between this ceremony, with all its solemn enlightened beauty, and the fanatic rites of the barefoot spear-throwers who flop down in the slime of the autumn rains before a tribal leader in an ignorant land to say that they would die for him.

There is no doubt about it. The Ethiopians are in need of teaching, and the Italians are just the people to bring to them the blessings of freedom, dignity and civilization.

New Motion Pictures

By William Lyon Phelps

AMONG the new pictures I am looking forward to with eagerness is "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Charles Laughton in the title part. This should be magnificent. I have enjoyed everything on the stage and in the pictures that Mr. Laughton has done, except in the picture "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," where, as the father of Elizabeth, I think he was miscast. He was perfect as the butler in "Ruggles of Red Gap." For the picture "Cyrano," the dialogue has been rewritten in English in rhymed couplets; it will be interesting to see how this sounds.

• • • •

I have seen three of Dickens' novels in the pictures: "David Copperfield" and "Great Expectations" in English, and "Little Dorrit" in German. All three were very fine. I am now looking forward to the coming season, when we shall see "Oliver Twist," "A Tale of Two Cities," and "Pickwick Papers." Freddie Bartholomew, who played the boy David, will be Oliver Twist. Another picture that I would not miss for anything in the world is the forthcoming production of "Anna Karenina," with Greta Garbo as Anna. This will be followed by Dostoevski's "Crime and Punishment," which has been dramatized for the legitimate stage three or four times.

A Comparison Of Perils.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Roy Chapman Andrews, the explorer, has a joke on his insurance company. Whenever he starts on an expedition, it cancels his accident policy, an action he attributes to pure ignorance. Writing in Cosmopoltian, he says:

It saves me money and they lose, because I am not half so likely to have an accident on a trip of real honest-to-goodness exploration as I would be in the city. Honestly, if I had as many narrow escapes in the Gobi Desert as I have had from being killed by motor cars or in other ways in America, I would write a book about them. The trouble is that such escapes become commonplace. Everyone living in the big cities has them every day or two, and it has robbed them of interest. An explorer's dangers are more unusual, and for that reason alone they seem greater.

Mr. Andrew's slant on the comparative perils of explorers and stay-at-homes furnishes food for thought. The great desert, with its wild animals, bandits, extremes of heat and cold, treacherous terrain, scanty food and water supplies, is actually safer, in his view, than the city's streets. From figures on the automobile carnage, it is open to little dispute.

A Philippine Protectorate?

Resident Commissioner And New President Debate Future Status Of Islands As Economic Angles Of Independence Darken Horizon.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

SHORTLY before the Philippine presidential election, Resident Commissioner Pedro Guevara arrived from Washington announcing that the Philippines ought to seek a permanent American protectorate and assuring the people that Congress would favor such an arrangement.

Manuel L. Quezon, now chosen as President of the Commonwealth, immediately issued a press statement in which he emphatically declared that he is against an American protectorate or any other kind of protectorate, that a protectorate is not the ideal of the Filipinos, and that, at any rate, any such proposition will never be considered favorably by Congress.

Quezon, it was observed, felt constrained to contradict Guevara for various reasons. As Guevara is still Philippine President Commissioner in Congress, his utterances may be taken here and in the United States as official and authoritative, and as reflecting those of Quezon himself. Furthermore, Guevara made his statement to newspapermen in his home in the presence of Quezon, who was there to welcome him. The newspapers reported Quezon's presence and implied that he regarded the Guevara statement with tacit approval. But the most important reason was probably the fact that both Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo and Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, rivals of Quezon for the Presidency, had been accusing him of intending, once he is President, to frustrate independence by seeking a permanent colonial status.

But Guevara could not be immediately cowed. He kept talking on his favorite subject. He made it a point, however, to announce that he returned to Manila especially to be able to vote for Quezon and Sergio Osmena for President and Vice President of the Commonwealth.

• • • •

"I HAVE sounded out individual Senators and Congressmen," Guevara declared after reading Quezon's statement in the newspapers, "and it is my opinion that a congressional majority would favor the extension of American protection to the islands.

"Why should not a protectorate be preferred to a neutralized status? Under a neutralized status, the Philippines will have all the signatories of the neutralization treaty as masters. Under an American protectorate we shall have only America as master, and we are quite used to her already.

"At any rate, Japan is dangerous. Many people seem to think that I am exaggerating the Japanese menace. I wish to God I were. Our province of Davao, now almost completely Japanized in spite of the American flag, is the answer. Didn't you read only the other day that Japan is asking England and Holland to permit her nationals to settle in their East Indian colonies? What can she not do in the Philippines, where she will not have to ask anybody's permission?

"Ambassador-at-large Debuchi, of Japan, when a Manila visitor recently, told the Manila press that Japan will first consider the matter before signing a neutralization treaty. In his statement, Japan showed her teeth. Put tersely, Debuchi said in effect: 'Well, we are ready to consider the neutralization of the Philippines after independence, but what will Japan get in exchange for her signature on the treaty of neutralization?'"

• • • •

WHEN Quezon, busy with his presidential campaign and not especially eager for a new issue, refused to engage in an extended exchange of views, however, Guevara made the following evasive statement:

"These are feverish preelection days and our eyes are too intently fixed on the goal of winning to pay much attention to the problems by the way. In 20 days more, the distracting fever will have subsided, and then we can buckle down to these neglected problems, confronting them with a clear eye and a steady hand."

Observers, however, see in the Guevara statement an indication that the future status of the Philippines, notwithstanding the provision of the independence law for complete liberation ten years from the inauguration of the Commonwealth, is far from being a closed matter. It may, indeed, be taken up again in the forthcoming conference on Philippine-American economic relations which President Roosevelt has promised to call in Washington shortly after the inauguration of the new Philippine government.

AT this conference it is generally expected that the task of adjusting Philippine-American relations to the new political set-up will be most difficult unless there is a disposition not to regard the latter as final, so that where the economic terms cannot be made to dovetail with the political terms the political terms may themselves be modified. If this policy is adopted it will mean a virtual reconsideration of the Philippine question.

Congress, so far, has chosen to regard the Philippine problem as political, albeit with inseparable economic complications. The solution reached in the independence law is consequently unsatisfactory from the economic angle. The economic conference, therefore, may be considered as an attempt to reach the heart of the problem from the economic approach. But so that the attempt at atonement may be reasonably successful, it would seem essential that the political plans already traced and partly executed be also regarded as open to alterations.

As a matter of fact, guarded statements of Governor General Frank Murphy, who is known as the father of the plan to call an economic conference on the Philippines, imply this much. "We must have an economy here," he has often stated, "that squares off with independence." The corollary is that the Philippines must have a political status commensurate with its ideal economy.

War Psychology.

NO more convincing proof of the current war psychology in Europe can be established than the round of virile bombast which recently resounded through the British press. If this be an example of prewar inanity, just consider the glories to follow, when patriotism becomes a national necessity like bullets and is turned out in the same way.

The Evening News:

There is something in the blood flow and the make-up of Britons which must give us an ascendency in any sport, if our representatives are wisely chosen and properly trained.

The Daily Sketch:

At a signal from the King's yacht, lights sprung up and illuminated the entire fleet. An Italian, who had been naturalized, thanked God that he was an Englishman. No other nation in the world could have done it, he said. We all agreed with him.

From the "Anthology of Empire":

From a letter to the News Chronicle:

Would it prove an impediment to Italian aggression if Abyssinia applied to us to become a member of the British Empire? Should we have the courage to accept if she did? . . . I should think the Abyssinians would be very pleased to accept the suggestion as the best way out of their present difficulties.

Lord Rothermere in the Daily Mail:

All sound thinking Britons will wish Italy well in the great enterprise to which she has set her hand. The day that Mussolini establishes Italian authority over the ancient but barbaric land of Ethiopia will complete the beneficial progress by which Europe has brought law, order, and public health to a continent which less than a century ago was plunged in primitive misery.

From a poster displayed in Manchester:

Patriotism, my friends, is the backbone of the empire, and what we ought to do is train that backbone and bring it to the front.

From an interview reported in the West Briton and Cornwall Advertiser:

He had never found militarism in the British army.

Uncertainty and doubt distress the minds of men.

Why?

Because Mr. Eden, our minister, is attending the meeting of the League of Nations Council at Geneva for the purpose of meddling in a dispute between two foreign countries.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Own Market Advice.

With nearly everybody reading the stock market tables again, after six years of what was mistaken for sincere repentance, the demand of the moment is for advice and information. In fact, it seems like the good old days of 1929. This department is ordinarily reluctant to offer its opinions on stocks, but the pressure for a little guidance has been more than it could stand. So here goes:

• • • •

STEELS—We think the steels are good for the long pull. People who haven't touched any steel in years are taking it again; in fact, we know a total abstainer who began buying it last week. "Always buy steel at 30!" a famous financier once said. Of course, if you are older than 30 it's a little different, but we feel you may take on a few shares up to middle age. Production at the steel mills has taken a sharp jump, business is good and there is even a feeling that in the years to come the companies may show a profit.

• • • •

COPPERS.—You have to acquire a taste for coppers, and not many people have it. All through the depression, however, most of the officers of the big copper companies have managed to keep their yachts overboard and belong to the best clubs, so we feel the industry has weathered the storm and has a future. There must be a consumer or two somewhere.

• • • •

RAILROAD EQUIPMENT.—All the roads are buying streamline engines, and if we only knew what company was making the funniest engines we would be in a position to offer valuable advice. The air conditioning corporations must be pretty busy, too, although we do not feel that they are a success until they do something about the men's smoker. The railroads are getting along with their old whistles, bells, red flags and cooking utensils, but are evidently buying considerable dining car furniture of a smarter type than heretofore. We feel optimistic about the equipment stocks, but maybe you'd better ask your wife before doing anything.

• • • •

OILS.—Automobile owners are beginning to oil their cars again for the first time in a long while and it was reliably reported last week that a man in Omaha changed the grease in his transmission. And then, too, there's those Addis Ababa wells.

• • • •

PACKERS.—Nobody who travels in a subway can doubt how things are in the packing industry. Get aboard, if you can.

What Is The National Tree?

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It will suit Californians, no doubt, but are residents of the 47 other States going to accept the designation of the sequoia as the national tree in a poll conducted by the National Life Conservation Society? The sequoia is a magnificent tree, but it is found in only one spot in one State, and for that reason could not be called the national tree, if national in this case bears the usual meaning of representative. Our choice? Well, the sand-bar willow, which is found in nearly every State, will not do, but we could do far worse than choose the horse chestnut or buckeye, which grows throughout the Union. A whole host of trees are entitled to consideration, among others the black walnut, the shagbark hickory, the sugar maple, the sycamore, the persimmon, the sassafras, the dogwood, the birch, the oak, the beech, the shadbush, the hackberry, the quaking aspen and the mesquite. But when the list has been run through, what tree is there to stand ahead of the American elm? It has beauty and grace. Its arching branches yield a fine shade. At home from Maine to the Rockies, it is as American as the Harvard yard or Valley Forge. It may not count, but here is a belated vote for the American elm.

The 8th WOMAN GETS MORE OUT OF LIFE

Eight million women have had to always consider the time of month in making an engagement — avoiding any strenuous activities on certain days.

Today, a million escape this regular martyrdom because they have accepted the aid of Midol. A tiny tablet, white and tasteless, is the secret of the eighth woman's poise and comfort at this time.

Are you a martyr to regular pain? Must you favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might change all this. Might have you your confident self, leading your regular life, free from periodic pain and discomfort.

The smallest degree of relief you might get from Midol means a great deal to your comfort.

Midol is taken any time, preferably just before the expected pain. This precaution often avoids the pain altogether. Yet, Midol is not a narcotic.

Get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case — they are usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, a card addressed to Midol, 170 Varick St., New York, brings a trial box in plain wrapper.

Skin Exerciser Does Wonders To Complexion

By Ruth Anne Davis.

MRS. S—— sat in front of her dressing table and looked at herself dejectedly in the mirror. Rubbing her hands lightly over her face she frowned to note the flabbiness of her skin and the myriad of small wrinkles around her mouth and the corners of her eyes. "I wish there were some way," she thought, "that I could exercise my skin! If I could just send it out for a game of tennis or a rouhd of golf!"

It's really a pity Mrs. S—— contented herself with worrying. If she had only made a round of the shops that morning it is probable she would have come across that little gem of a "suction tapper" made especially for exercising the skin.

It's a strange looking little device resembling a rubber paddle. The surface of the "tapper" end is cut up in little squares waffle fashion. When you pat your face, it's these indented squares that cause a kind of suction which results in pepping up the blood circulation.

The handle of the "tapper" is so flexible that when you hold it in your hand the least motion sends it pitter-pat against your face with gentle vibrations.

Most women can't give their faces the expert massage they need, for their hands simply aren't trained. With the "suction tapper," however, it's the simplest thing in the world—and grand for the skin! The perked up circulation and this "exercise" naturally increase the activity of the skin cells, and enable them to throw off the waste matter which so frequently accumulates in the pores. The skin soon begins to lose its flabbiness. Wrinkles fill out, and marks of old age are supplanted by a youthful firmness.

Special Sale of Bath Sets.

THE BUYER of a local store heard that a large toiletry concern was closing out its 50-cent bath sets because the manufacturing cost was too great. So, this buyer immediately bought up the sets and is selling them now for 19 cents. These are real bargains. Each set includes a cellophane-wrapped package of water softener, and a large box of bath powder in lavender, gardenia or carnation fragrance.

Perfume With Personality.

A YOUNG CHEMIST in a certain perfume concern should be congratulated on three new fragrances which he has just discovered. One of these was made from a formula prepared especially for a dancer in the Russian Imperial ballet, by order of the czar.

Conceived from the idea that each note in music has an olfactory equivalent, and that the blended equivalents accomplished the spiritual reaction of the music, this fragrance corresponds to the notes in a measure from the "Naila Waltz." There's definite personality about the perfume with a rhythmic character, charming and imperial.

The second of his perfumes is called Christmas bouquet. It's a fragrance portraying the spirit of Christmas in flowers, with olfactory equivalents from the song "Holy Night." You'll find it reminds you of gold, frankincense and myrrh, of burning candles and Christmas trees.

Fascination, the third of his perfumes, breathes the magic charm of India, the mystic aura of Tibet, the ancient wisdom of China, with many contributions from far-flung outposts of civilization. It's a spicy and mystical bouquet of deep character.

You may give a touch of elegance, a dashing bit of color and no end of chic to your new suit or dress with a bunch of the Bacchanalian grapes featured in a downtown store.

The grapes are made of velvet in deep luscious shades of red, purple, green and orange. Only $1 a bunch.

Women of India Called Models of Grace With Mother-in-Law Trouble Unknown

Wives Are Domiciled in Homes of Husbands' Parents.

IN INDIA a married woman always lives under the same roof as her husband's parents. Yet "mother-in-law trouble," as Americans know or hear it, is as unusual in that country as a Hindu woman in spike-heeled shoes.

So reports Mrs. Loy Long, missionary to Sholapur, India, who with her husband recently visited Rev. and Mrs. Allen A. Stockdale in Washington.

Explaining that in India a man's wife and mother are happy in one house, Mrs. Long pointed out this was probably "because Indian women don't fly off the handle, quarrel, or give vent to their ill-temper in any way, no matter what happens. Self-control is part of every woman's religion, whether she is a Parsee, Hindu, Christian or Mohammedan. Consequently, a bickering or nagging woman is an unknown quantity in India."

Marry At Early Age.

Mrs. Long also pointed out women of India were "the most serene, the calmest and apparently the most contented wives and mothers in the world."

"Indian girls look forward to marriage and motherhood and to eventually being the highest power in the home," she said. "Marrying at an early age, the Indian woman bears her children when she is young, and is generally an old woman with many grandchildren by the time she is 40. But she doesn't dread old age, for the years bring honor to the woman who has many sons. Each son brings his wife to live in his home, and there his mother is queen. Every woman, therefore, considers herself blessed, her prayers answered, if she has many sons, many daughters-in-law, and many grandchildren under her roof."

Mrs. Long mentioned that American women could follow the Indian women's example in regard to posture and manner of walking. "Poised and positively regal in bearing and gait, the Indian woman glides along gracefully without any bobbing up and down of the head, any swinging of shoulders or shuffling of feet," she said. "From early childhood, she has probably known how to carry vases and packages on her head. This, of course, is the chief reason she stands straight, holds her head erect and walks along smoothly. Then, too, her feet are never crammed into tight shoes—or shoes of any kind, for that matter. She either wears sandals or goes barefoot.

Charming Hostesses.

"Furthermore she is a charming hostess. From the time you enter the door of her house until you leave, you are treated with the utmost courtesy. She may put perfume on your wrists, play on her lute for your entertainment, serve you delicious refreshments, or do fine embroidery as she talks to you. You sit on the floor, as she does, and probably wonder how she can sit so long and so straight without an aching back and legs. You will also probably marvel at the ease with which she crosses her legs and drops to the floor, arising hours later with no cracking of the knees, and no groans.

"Whatever she does for your entertainment, you will enjoy, but you had better be up on your Eastern etiquette if you expect to be invited again. A social call to the home of a high caste Indian woman is a very formal event, involving much salaaming and ceremony."

Discussing what the well-dressed Indian woman wears, Mrs. Long mentioned that the sari (the long loose garment draped over the head and shoulders) is to the Indian what the shawl is to the Spaniard. "Almost all women there wear the sari," she continued. "But the way in which it is draped tells whether they are Parsee, Hindu, Mohammedan, or Christian. I notice fashion designers are adopting the sari for American women, particularly for evening wear. Now, if women here—and not only here, but all over the world—could copy the Indian woman's disposition, her serenity, poise and grace, it would be a good thing," said Mrs. Long.

Harris & Ewing.

A shrewish wife and a scolding mother are virtually unknown quantities in India, "where a good disposition is part of every woman's religion," reports Mrs. Loy Long, missionary, who spent the last five years in the Bombay presidency.

Magistrate's Wife Believes in Knowing Work of Husband

To be a 100 per cent wife a woman would be vitally interested in, and intelligent about the business or profession her husband is engaged in, believes Mrs. Benjamin E. Greenspan, wife of a former New York magistrate.

In pursuance of her belief, Mrs. Greenspan, after 18 years of marriage, has enrolled in the law school where her husband took his degree 20 years ago. Mr. Greenspan, who heartily indorses her course, says she turned to law because she was "tired of staying home and frying eggs." The Greenspans have four children, the eldest of whom is 17.

"I don't play bridge," said Mrs. Greenspan, "and I don't enjoy gadding or window shopping. I've reached the place where I'm burdened with hours of leisure that I used to spend playing with and caring for my children. So I'm turning to law."

Spirit of Play Gives Impetus To Boys' Tasks

They Can Be Trained to Take an Interest in Domestic Work.

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

This question, a vital one to every mother, is raised in the following letter:

* * * *

DEAR MRS. BARTLETT: Your articles in The Post are most interesting. Perhaps you can offer some suggestions that will help me.

I have two boys, 5 and 7 years old. I feel that they should be taught to do, willingly, a few things about the house.

Their tendency is, now, to resent having any regular duties to perform. How can I make these tasks more interesting? MRS. A. H.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. A. H.: Thank you for your letter. I think the definition, given by a group of children at a school in which I taught might be of interest to your boys. These children defined work as "what you do because it has to be done and play as what you do because you want to." Even a child of five can comprehend this and he is not too young to do his share in the home, even though his help may be trivial to you. Play dominates the activities of younger children, but at the age of 5 or a little later interest in work begins to supersede that of play so that both your boys should be receptive to the need of the stabilizing influence of work.

A typical play experience for your five-year-old might be building with blocks. Out of this should grow a work experience in putting the blocks away. He will easily realize the reason for this responsibility. This appreciation of responsibility can be carried over then, into the care of his own clothing. Of course, he should be provided with low hooks and a place for his things which is within his reach.

Variety of Occupations.

A child of seven has usually become interested in occupations corresponding to those of adults. He is more group minded than the 5-year-old and can be taught that in view of the fact that all members of the family share the home each one must take his fair share in caring for it. Your 7-year-old might like to do some marketing. He could buy the staples for the family and in this way familiarize himself, not only with the different denominations of money, but also with the names of the staple foods and their use. He can also bathe himself, care for his possessions and assist with his younger brother. If you have a yard there are many outside jobs such as raking leaves, for which he can be held responsible.

Make a Game of Work.

There are many more ways in which your boys can be of service around the house, but from the tone of your letter I assume that you do not want this type of information as much as you do the ways and means of putting it across. If you will make their work more playful by making a game of it until the routine is set I believe whatever work you decide upon for them will be a joy and will make them realize the difference between work and play, and the necessity for both.

Impressions of Iceland All Wrong, Says Visitor

Sigridur Bachmann Here Studying America's Health System.

MISS SIGRIDUR BACHMANN.

SMALL, bespectacled Miss Sigridur Bachmann, visiting in this country from Iceland to gather information on our public-health system, is primarily concerned over the impression she finds prevalent among Americans that Iceland is a bleak, barren spot, given over chiefly to glaciers, volcanoes and quaint fishermen.

This impression, Miss Bachmann said yesterday at the Dodge Hotel, is entirely false.

"In the first place," she said emphatically, "Iceland isn't cold. The climate is modified by the Gulf Stream which flows close to our shores, and, although in November and December the days are only five or six hours long, it is just as warm, generally speaking, as it is in England and America. Last May, in fact, was even warmer in Iceland than it was in England.

"While fishing is our chief industry, there are many other occupations," she said. "We have businessmen, doctors, professors and actors, to name but a few. Women in my country enjoy the same privileges as men, and are beginning to enter the business world as secretaries and stenographers.

About the only thing which America has that Iceland hasn't, according to Miss Bachmann, is night clubs. So far, she says, they have made no headway in her country.

Miss Bachmann, who is a Red Cross nurse, has come to this country at the request of the Icelandic Red Cross Society to observe methods here and take back to the work in her native land, to which she will return in November, the benefit of her experience. From the health division of the Rockefeller Foundation she has been awarded a further trip through several Eastern cities to study their public health systems.

Miss Bachmann remarked that although she had not yet had time to coordinate her impressions of our health methods into definite conclusions, she feels that the medical systems in the two countries are very much alike, the only difference being one of degree. Iceland has never had the funds necessary to develop and extend its health service to the extent of that in the United States.

"However," Miss Bachmann said, "with what I have learned about efficiency and organization in your country, I hope to develop our system of public health in Iceland. I have already decided that your nurses receive a more practical training than ours, and so I plan to introduce your methods into our nursing schools at home."

Much of Miss Bachmann's work in her native country is among the women and girls, classes of whom she instructs in first aid, home hygiene, bedside nursing and infant welfare. She also works at a lonely fishing outpost on the south coast. Here there is no doctor, so she must treat all minor ailments, and, if necessary, ride half an hour to fetch a physician.

Tired Feeling, Temper Held Hunger Signs

THE HUSBAND who returns home at night from his office tired and "cross as a bear" should be fed at once rather than told to lie down or read the paper. This is the advice of two Yale University physicians, Dr. Howard W. Haggard and Dr. Leon A. Greenberg, who have published a new and somewhat revolutionary book on diet.

In their volume, "Diet and Physical Efficiency," which embodies results of their studies of both industrial and white collar workers, they point out that fatigue is often hunger, even though the victim is not aware of it. They say:

"The feeling of fatigue and irritability that indicates the need for food is not relieved by rest, but is relieved by food. The man returning to his home in the evening, tired, irritable and dissipirited from a hard day at his office, finds no satisfaction or relief in the rest obtained by waiting for his evening meal. Relief from irritability, fatigue and depression comes only when the meal is eaten."

The physicians insist that the important thing is not so much what we eat as when we eat. It is better to eat little and often, they say.

Their studies of factory workers have convinced them that "the frequency of meals—the daily food remaining the same in quantity and quality—is a component factor in determing the rise and fall of muscular activity and industrial output."

Electroplating Principle Used For Hay Fever

Relief Is Obtained by Ionization With Little Discomfort.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE are many ways of giving drugs. The simplest, of course, is to administer the necessary ingredients by mouth, as the digestive tract rapidly pours soluble substances into the blood, whether they be foods or poisons. Many medicinal agents can be mixed with oils or fats and rubbed into the skin. For quick effects, however, solutions or drugs may be injected under the skin or introduced directly into the circulation.

When the mucous membrane of the nose becomes inflamed it is difficult to relieve the resulting pain and discomfort through the application of local remedies. The fact is that they do not penetrate deeply enough. Nevertheless, a patient with swollen, congested mucous surfaces can be relieved, or at least made much more comfortable, through the employment of any process that will shrink the tissues without injuring them.

Many years ago an attempt was made to drive drugs into the tissues by means of the electric current. The procedure is called ionic medication [ionization], and involves the same principle used in electroplating.

Treatment Saves Tissues.

The recent investigations of H. L. Warwick, of Fort Worth, Tex., have shown the value of developing a careful, scientific technique in applying metallic particles [zinc, tin, etc.] to the mucous membrane of the nose by means of the electric current.

He has shown that certain metals, for example zinc, deposited on the mucous membrane, will clot the contents of the outer cells, but if a mild current passes though the tissues the zinc ions will penetrate deeply and shrink the cell contents to a far greater depth. When carefully administered there is no burning or destruction of the tissues.

Little Immediate Discomfort.

There is little immediate discomfort, although the patient may recognize a metallic taste in the mouth. Within 10 or 12 hours, however, there may be an intense burning sensation in the nose and eyes, and some pain and headache. These symptoms pass away within a short time.

The particular value of the treatment is in those conditions associated with hay fever [allergy], in which the individual is unusually sensitive to some particular protein, the symptoms of which include intense congestion of the nasal passages.

Regardless of its specific effect, the treatment will shrink the tissues and block the absorption of proteins, such as dust particles, pollen grains, etc.

In a recent report H. G. Tobey indicates that in a short series of hay fever cases the method has been followed by relief in 85 per cent. He also observed that asthmatic symptoms presented by a few of his patients disappeared.

Street-Length Cocktail Dress Is Conservative, Yet Festive Enough for Smart Afternoon Affairs

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Ever wish you could go straight from the office or shopping tour to the tea or cocktail party? Fashion thinks over the situation and gets a bright idea . . . the street-length cocktail dress! It goes under a daytime coat—yet turns her out the toast of the party!

Gay deceivers many of these dresses. Conservative enough for daytime wear; elegant with satin and lame and twinkling clips later on. This miracle is achieved by a dark jacket that can be shed, to reveal the glory of a rich looking blouse beneath.

Festive enough for the smartest afternoon affair, yet the street-length cocktail dress never commits the sin of making the business suited escort feel out of the picture.

Fashion likes interesting sleeves this fall . . . sleeves with a snap and a dash to them often achieved by fullness. Sometimes so much fullness at the shoulder as to give almost a leg-o-mutton effect, as in the dress sketched at the right of the illustration. Throw off the jacket of this same dress, and the white blistered satin top emerges in all its glory. A twinkling array of rhinestone buttons marches up the center front to a high neck closing. The rest of the outfit is of black crepe.

Two-color combinations are liked by many women—so we've sketched a typical two-piece, two-color dress at the left of the picture. The skirt is black crepe—the blouse a merry lipstick red interwoven with a dull gold thread. A gold Florentine clip finishes off the high neckline.

Velvet makes grand cocktail dresses—so does matelasse, and this fall there's a renewed interest in sheers! Since these are street-length dresses, they go in for street colors. For black, of course, and the new Renaissance bright brown. And for rich wine reds and greens.

So the street-length cocktail dress combines practicality with glamour!

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT'S elegant to push a button and have practically anything at all hop right out of the walls. But those slick new apartments don't take all the honors. The older, less last-wordish homes still have some compensations. For one thing, they're likely to have enough rooms for more gracious living, and then those long halls may not look so stylish, but they give much more privacy through the house than is possible when all the rooms open into each other.

* * * *

K. L. H. writes: Our house is very nice and comfortable, but it's not new and so there is the inevitable long hall. I'm simply at a loss to know what to do with it. I'd like a little furniture if possible, though it seems too narrow except just at the entrance, where there is a small turn.

* * * *

Answer: I'd have a small table or a narrow chest with a mirror over it at the turn, where there is enough room. Or a what-not cabinet would be charming. Then for the length of the hall there are several things you might do. One solution is interesting wallpaper and a good carpet of a vigorous color. Another idea would be to have a series of large decorative maps framed attractively and hung in panels on the walls. Or a series of pictures that illustrate some special hobby in the family—boats, flowers, birds, horses. We have a friend whose hall is made interesting by a whole row of fascinating pictures of various types of airships in color—her husband collects aviation prints, especially those illustrating famous flights.

Chocolate Cake Varies in Color To Suit Tastes

Recipes for Red Devil's Food and Darker One Are Given Today.

Do you prefer a red devil's-food cake or a black one? Here is a topic of discussion for you connoisseurs of chocolate cake. If it is a question of ingredients, those of you who like sour-milk cake will no doubt favor the red demon and those who use sweet milk take the black devil's food. Each then to his individual taste and here are the recipes for a red and a black devil's food. Try them both and take your choice.

Mellow Devil's Food Cake.

2 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ cup butter or other shortening
1¼ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs or 3 yolks, unbeaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted,
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add soda and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly and add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition; then chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two deep greased 9-inch layer pans or three greased 8-inch layer pans in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 25 minutes. Spread with the ever popular 7-minute frosting, flavored with orange rind, between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Seven-Minute Frosting.

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons water
1½ teaspoons light corn sirup
2 teaspoons grated orange rind

Combine egg whites, sugar, water and corn sirup in top of double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add grated orange rind and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers, or top and sides of 8x8x2-inch cake (generously).

Red Devil's Food Cake.

1½ cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon double acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
½ cup thick sour milk
½ cup boiling water
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and soda, and sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs. Beat mixture vigorously. Add flour and sour milk alternately, a small amount at a time. Pour the boiling water into the melted chocolate, mix quickly. Cool slightly before adding to cake batter. Mix thoroughly. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 25 minutes. To make three 10-inch layers, double recipe. Cover with marshmallow frosting, recipe follows:

New Ovenette Fills the Needs Of Small-Apartment Dweller

Electric Cooker Can Be Connected Into a Light Socket.

Manufacturers are giving special attention to the designing of kitchen equipment that will fit the requirements of the woman who lives in a small one-room apartment. Many of these apartments have no kitchen and some of the ones that do are not equiped with an oven that is at all adequate.

A small oven is not the point of contention, for if pans are selected to fit the oven space, it may be used quite as successfully as a larger oven. It is the poorly insulated oven that causes the kitchen to become overheated and the actual temperature of the oven to be irregular that brings the annoyance.

The woman who has this problem to face will be intrigued with the possibilities for successful baking offered by the electric oven illustrated. She can use it in her tiny kitchenette or in her apartment that does not boast of any kitchen space, for it can be connected to a light socket or a wall plug and used with either alternating or direct current.

Hot breads, pies, cakes, escalloped dishes, custards and roasts are just a few of the numerous dishes that can be baked to perfection in this tiny oven. The three-way switch allows for low, medium or hot temperatures.

The oven is small, but it is well insulated, and all the heat used is employed in cooking, so that no heat is wasted by circulating around the room, with the result that the cost of operating the oven is very little.

The same manufacturer also makes a similar oven that is heated by placing over a gas burner on top of the range. This oven can be used as effectively as the one heated by electric current.

Food Column Wins Housewife's Praise

Mrs. F. A. Holland Likes the Simple, Tasty Recipes.

"Your food column becomes more interesting every day. I like the simple yet tasty recipes you print," writes Mrs. F. A. Holland of 1724 Seventeenth street northwest. "I hope the column will be continued, for I know hundreds of housewives who wouldn't miss it. I visited in Virginia this summer and all the women raved about your recipes. And now, if it isn't too much trouble, I would like some special information.

Of course we are delighted by Mrs. Holland's enthusiastic comment, but we are still more appreciative of the fact that she asks questions! She wants to know how to make Harvard beets and a good rarebit and what to serve for refreshments at a bridge party. And there is nothing we like better than performing a personal service for our readers.

Bright Colors Add Edibility To Pale Meals

By Dorothea Duncan.

If you have one esthetic bone in your body you will wince when you sit down to a meal where the food has been haphazardly selected without any sense of contrasting colors. A vegetable platter, for example, can be as artistically arranged from the color standpoint as an old-fashioned nosegay, or it can be as flat and uninteresting as a sheet of white paper.

There is more danger in serving meals that are esthetically lacking than in ones that do not measure up to the specified caloric content. A meal that is attractive to look at is immediately acceptable on sight, while one that consists of many sickly yellows does not have enough eye appeal to make it interesting even to the hungriest mortal.

If you haven't been watching your menus from the color standpoint, change your tactics. If it must be mashed potatoes and buttered cabbage for dinner, brighten up the cabbage with a fine spray of paprika and mask the potatoes with some finely chopped parsley. A brilliant garnish will always help to lighten the face of a pale meal.

There are enough colors in the vegetable rainbow to bring contrast into your menus every day in the week. Save the garnet of the beet for a meal that doesn't already have the tawny carrot or the lovely red of the tomato to give it life. Add a bit of chopped red pimiento to corn that looks too white or creamed potatoes that need color. Try bright green broccoli next to the soft mauve of the eggplant instead of potatoes.

A first try at bringing color contrasts into a meal may best be brought about by the use of different colored vegetables. Meat and eggs, too, offer their share of color, but often in a more subdued manner. The darker meats offer opportunity for a bright splash of red, green, or yellow. The delicate pink of smoked ham finds its best contrast in greens, white and shades of orange. The light gold of scrambled eggs calls for a splash of brilliant red and emerald green.

Give more thought to the colors that you place side by side on your table. If you create the effect of charm by contrasting colors your meals will be far more successful than if you spend all your time concentrating on matching vitamins and weighing calories.

Measure Shortening With a Tablespoon

Special Care Needed to Keep Cake From Crumbling.

A cake that is too rich will crumble, therefore special attention must be taken in measuring the amount of shortening. If the amount is small, merely several tablespoons, for example, it is more accurate to measure the fat with a tablespoon, leveling off each spoonful with the flat edge of a spatula or knife, than to try to judge it accurately by placing the fat in a divided measuring cup.

A nest of separate measuring cups, each one designed to hold a standard fraction of one cup—a fourth, third, half, etc.— is a great aid in measuring small amounts of shortening.

However, if you have just the single divided measuring cup, the shortening may be measured accurately by the following method. If the cake you are baking requires one-third of a cup, fill the one cup to the two-thirds line with water, then add bits of fat until the water reaches the one cup level.

New Punch Bowls Are Small and Streamlined

Styles in punch bowls have changed. This small streamlined bowl of chromium with its ledge for glasses replaces the old-fashioned punch bowl of heavy cut glass and great proportions.

Waxed Paper Keeps Cake From Sticking

Double Thickness of Heavy Kind Is Required.

Proper lining of the pan in which a refrigerator cake is molded is important if the cake is to be removed from the pan without sticking. Many women prefer to use a spring mold, but if an ordinary bread pan is lined with heavy waxed paper before the ingredients are laid in the pan in layers the cake will emerge just as triumphantly.

Take a double sheet of waxed paper and fit it into the bottom of an ordinary bread pan, cutting out the corners in a V shape, so that they can be folded neatly to form a box. Let the paper stand about 2 inches above the sides of the pan when the box has been lowered in to fit the bread pan. Be sure that the waxed paper fits the pan smoothly.

Then layer the cake into the box, and after it has set the required time in the refrigerator, remove the cake from the pan by lifting the waxed paper. A double thickness of heavy waxed paper is necessary so that it will not break during the lifting from the pan. The paper will peel from the cake very easily, leaving the edges of the loaf unmarred.

Dairy Cream Cosmetic Offered as Beautifier

Cleopatra was said to have used milk baths as an aid to beauty. A dairy in Long Beach, Calif., is now preparing a complexion cream consisting of 100 per cent pure dairy cream with other ingredients. This cream which serves as a cleanser, tissue builder, and powder base is known as beauty creme of milk and is distributed by the milkmen along with the daily deliveries of milk.

Wild Roseberry Jam Recipe Is Discovered

We are indebted to Helen Ramisch, of 611 Keefer place northwest, for a recipe for wild roseberry jam, requested by a reader, whose mother used the same recipe in Hungary 30 years ago.

The berries should be cut in half and washed thoroughly. Put on just enough water to cover the berries and steam until tender. Press through a fine sieve. To each cup of pulp, add a cup of sugar. Cook for 15 minutes. Put in jars and seal.

"The jam is very nice," our correspondent says. "It is a deep red shade and has a delicious, spicy taste."

New Flavor in Pie.

The next time you make an apple pie or applesauce substitute maple sugar in whole or in part for the sweetening required. The result will be an entirely new and exciting flavor.

Delicious Almonds Prepared at Home

Housekeeper Can Have Tid-Bit by Using Simple Recipe.

Delicious salted almonds can be prepared very easily at home. Buy the almonds in the shell. Remove the shells and blanch the nuts by pouring boiling water over them. Let them stand in the water for from 2 to 5 minutes, until the brown skin can be slipped off with the fingers. Pour off the water and remove the skins. Dry the nuts well between two clean towels.

Put a small amount of oil, perferably olive oil of good quality, into a shallow pan, pour in the nuts and stir them until they are well coated with the oil. There should be no excess oil in the pan after the nuts have been stirred.

Set the pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit), and stir them frequently until they become light brown in color. Drain the nuts on absorbent paper, spread them on a platter and sprinkle with salt.

Modern Bowl Should Revive Punch Serving

Chromium Receptacle With Stream Lines Is Aid to Hostess.

Punch will be the main refreshment attraction at small informal gatherings this fall. The popularity of punch for small groups always has been overshadowed by that of those beverages which could be poured from pitcher or cocktail shaker into tall or short glasses, for punch, to be gracefully served, must be ladled from a punch bowl. And such punch bowls! They were mammoth-mouthed affairs of heavy cut glass or crystal and fitted into the scheme of things only when the guest list was long and the party very formal.

Now someone has designed this up-to-the-minute bowl for the small party. It is a shining object of chromium surrounded by a rim that is designed to hold but 12 glasses. The streamlined bowl will fit into the most modern setting, but the glasses, which come in deep ruby or lovely cobalt blue, give it an antique look, too, so it can be used with other older and more established patterns in china. The round knobs that finish punch bowl lid and ladle match the brilliant color of the surrounding glasses.

The moderate price is another interesting feature of this punch bowl, and it can be purchased in a Washington store, too.

It is the first real find among household accessories of the fall season. We suggest that if you are buying a Christmas present a week, that you walk downtown and purchase one of these chromium punch bowls. It will make an ideal present for the newlyweds who do their entertaining on a small scale.

Fight Opens For Lewis' House Seat

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 1.—Five Republicans of western Maryland are eyeing the Sixth District congressional seat of Representative David J. Lewis, Democrat.

With one candidate already in the field and another reported to have obtained the support of Gov. Harry W. Nice, prominent Republicans seem anxious for the chance to oppose Lewis for reelection.

State Senator Robert B. Kimble, Cumberland, is definitely in the field for the nomination, and it is accepted in Republican circles that Mayor Irving M. Wertz, Hagerstown, has been promised the support of the Nice organization in the district, which includes Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery Counties.

Senator Kimble and Mayor Wertz are not without opposition in their home districts, however. In Senator Kimble's county Perry A. Nicklin, county treasurer, and A. Charles Stewart, president of the Board of County Commissioners, also have aspirations for the nomination.

Miller Reported Active.

In Washington County State Senator Ernest W. Miller is reported active in his own behalf. There is also the possibility that Police Magistrate Harold C. Smith, Rockville, defeated by Lewis in 1932, will again seek the nomination.

It is no secret that Republicans hope to regain the Sixth District seat which Lewis wrested from the late Frederick N. Zihlman in 1930.

It is held probable that Smith and Senator Miller will not actually enter the field for the nomination and eventually will declare for the nomination of Mayor Wertz. On the other hand, it is said that Senator Kimble, Nicklin and Stewart, the Alleghany County aspirants, are prepared to battle it out with the Hagerstown official.

A recent visitor here, Senator Kimble attempted to enlist local Republican leaders in his cause, declaring that he will carry his candidacy into a primary fight if necessary.

Identified With Labor.

In many respects the career to date of Senator Kimble has followed closely those of Lewis and the late Mr. Zihlman, each of whom has been closely identified with labor interests and has advanced from the Maryland Legislature to Congress.

The Alleghany County Senator has demonstrated his ability as a vote getter against organized opposition. Last year he was opposed by the Allegany County Republican organization for nomination, but he defeated former State Senator Glenn Beall and Jonathan Sleeman, former member of the House of Delegates.

With a nomination fight limited largely to a battle between Mayor Wertz and Senator Kimble, Republicans look upon Garrett, Frederick and Montgomery Counties as the principal battlegrounds. Observers believe Mayor Wertz can carry Washington County and Senator Kimble can win in Allegany County. Frederick and Garrett Counties have no prospective favorite sons seeking the nomination. It is held unlikely that Smith or any other Montgomery County Republican would enter a primary contest against Mayor Wertz.

Republicans consider the Sixth District normally Republican. They point out that a Democrat never held the seat more than three consecutive terms. They also point to the decline in Lewis' majority in 1934 as compared with 1932. They hold high hopes of regaining the seat next year but anticipate a battle among themselves for the nomination.

Reserve Bank Sees Farming Income Climb

Trade on Fifth Reserve District "Fully Up to Season Level."

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 30.—Agricultural conditions are "quite favorable" for comparatively large returns ot farmers in the Fifth Federal Reserve District this fall, the Federal Reserve Bank here said today in its monthly review of business conditions.

Trade in August and early September was "fully up to season level," the review said. Earning assets of the Reserve Bank rose slightly and the circulation of Federal Reserve notes increased with the opening of tobacco markets and the beginning of early fall trade.

Member banks slightly increased their loans and materially increased demand deposits. Debits to individual accounts declined 2.9 per cent in comparison with the four preceding weeks, but were 10.9 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of 1934.

Commercial failures were fewer in August than in the same month last year, but liabilities were $1,431,207, as compared with $440,675 in August, 1934.

Coal production was higher than in July, but 5.4 per cent less than in August, 1934. Textile mills stepped up operations and consumed more cotton than in July this year or August, 1934. Tobacco markets in South Carolina and part of North Carolina sold a "large volume" of tobacco in August for prices "considered on the whole satisfactory." Tobacco manufacturers continued a high rate of production.

Construction improved noticeably, contracts actually awarded in August doubling those of August, 1934. Employment als o improved.

Retail trade in August measured 7 per cent greater in volume than in August last yera, as reported by 31 leading department stores.

School Burns, 200 Children Escape Injury

By the Associated Press.

Calvert, Md., Sept. 30.—The more than 200 pupils and six teachers of the Calvert Agricultural High School here escaped without injury today as fire destroyed it.

The fire is believed to have originated in a defective flue. Within a moment after it was discovered in the basement, Principal George Gifford sounded the alarm and the pupils moved out quietly, as they had been taught in fire drills.

Six fire companies from nearby towns answered the alarm, but were unable to work effectively as the nearest water supply was a mile and a half away.

The two-story brick structure was built in 1915. Members of the Cecil County board of education were unable to estimate the loss, and it was not learned immediately whether it was covered by insurance.

State Police Commission Given Garey

President Emeritus of St. John's College to Serve 4 Years.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 30.—On the threshold of ancient McDowell Hall, Maj. Enoch Barton Garey, president emeritus of St. John's College, today was commissioned major and superintendent of State police by Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, college president.

In an informal ceremony, Col. Woodcock, former national prohibition administrator and special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, presented the commission to his former classmate in behalf of Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Col. Woodcock, in paying tribute to Maj. Garey, said: "It is a great personal pleasure for me to act at the request of the Governor and give this commission as superintendent of State police to you, my classmate and friend.

Experiences Cited.

"I know you will make a success of the office. I have been in the business of apprehending malefactors of the law myself. Then I used to wonder if there were not more violations of the motor vehicle laws than those of the prohibition laws. I would like to give you one bit of advice. It is just as much the duty of investigators and police officers to protect the innocent from molestation as it is to apprehend the guilty."

Col. Woodstock then presented the commission to the new superintendent, who expressed his appreciation, saying, "Not only have you given me support but a philosophy of conduct. In administrating the great position of trust you held with the National Government you kept your eyes on the main probelms, the important things. You let the smaller things go. The manner in which you handled that great office certainly will be an ideal for me."

Grouped on the ancient portico surrounding the principals were a score of distinguished guests, including Capt. Douglas L. Howard, U. S. N., retired, dean of St. John's; Col. D. F. Duvall, U. S. A., retired; State Senator Ridgeley P. Melvin, of Anne Arundel County; James A. Walton, treasurer and member of the college board of visitors and governors; Peter H. Magruder, former secretary of the Naval Academy; William A. Strohm, Annapolis postmaster, and Dr. Edward D. Johnson, of St. Anne's Protestant Episcopal Church.

To Be in Office 4 Years.

Among the St. John's alumni, faculty, students and visitors to congratulate Maj. Garey were Lieut. Andrew T. Conner and Sergt. E. S. Haddaway, of the State police. Lieut. Conner conveyed a message of congratulations from Maj. J. Purdon Wright, former police chief, who was detained in court.

Maj. Garey was accompanied here by Mrs. Gary and Mrs. Randolph Winslow, a relative. He will hold office for four years, completing Maj. Wright's unexpired term, which began last June 1. Gov. Nice appointed Maj. Garey to the position Saturday.

Couple Observe 64th Marriage Anniversary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., Sept. 30.—Mr. and Mrs. George H. Shaw, who celebrated the sixty-fourth anniversary of their marriage at their home at National, near here yesterday, and at the same time the ninetieth birthday anniversary of Mrs. Shaw, are believed to have been married longer than any other couple in Maryland. The late Rev. John M. Clymer, a pioneer Presbyterian minister of this section, performed the marriage ceremony.

Shaw was a farmer for a number of years. Mrs. Shaw, a native of Lanarkshire, Scotland, came to America with her parents in a sailing vessel when she was 6 years old.

2 More Offers Of Bus Service Made to P. S. C.

B. & A. and Peninsula Seek Franchise as Red Star Proposal Is Studied.

Baltimore, Sept. 30.—Two new offers of bus service along the old South Shore division of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railway were before the Public Service Commission today as it studied the application for franchise made by the Red Star Bus Lines.

The new offers were made by the Baltimore and Annapolis Railway, operating part of the old W. B. & A. system, and the Peninsula Transit Line. They were brought out as attorneys argued for and against the Red Star application.

The B. & A. said it would run four or five round trips daily along the General's highway to Glen Burnie, and might extend the service to Gambrills. The Peninsula asks permission to establish two feeder lines to its present route along the Crain highway. One of the feeders would run along the General's highway to the Crain highway. The other would run from Fort George G. Meade to Millersville.

After hearing arguments of attorneys on the Red Star application, the commission took the matter under advisement.

Shortly before the hearing, a letter was received from the Gambrills Improvement Civic Association asking that rail service be given preference over bus service. However, no application for a rail franchise is pending.

Danville Votes Today On PWA Power Plant

Danville, Va., Sept. 30 (AP).—Voters of Danville will determine tomorrow whether a hydro-electric development in Patrick County shall be undertaken with the aid of the Public Works Administration.

They will vote on a bond issue of $1,513,000, which may be coupled with a grant of $1,237,909 to make a total of $2,750,909 available for the project. Its construction would consume two years and provide work for 600 men.

The polls open at 6:05 a. m. on Danville's busiest day of the year—the opening of the tobacco market. A heavy vote is expected.

Mrs. Buxton Committed To Hospital

Cas eto Be Presented to Grand Jury Oct. 21 at Chesterton.

By the Associated Press.

Catonsville, Md., Sept. 30.—Mrs. Thelma Buxton, young alleged slayer of her mother-in-law, was in the Spring Grove State Hospital here tonight.

She was brought here today from Chestertown, where she had been held in jail since last Friday after the hacked body of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Effie Buxton, was found in their apartment there.

Her husband, Dr. Kenneth Buxton, professor of chemistry at Washington College in Chestertown, was in Worcester, Mass., today attending the funeral of his mother. The body was taken there from Chestertown yesterday.

Mrs. Buxton's removal to the State hospital followed a report of two alienists that she appeared to be "mentally sick." Her relatives had asked that she be removed to a private institution, saying that they would bear the costs.

Circuit Court Judge Thomas J. Keating signed the order for her committal to Spring Grove today. At Spring Grove she will be a State charge.

The next term of circuit court at Chestertown is scheduled to begin October 21 and Mrs. Buxton's case probably will be presented to the grand jury at that time. It is not believed likely, however, that she will come to trial then.

Mrs. Buxton was brought here by Sheriff and Mrs. John N. Bennett, Dr. Frank B. Hines and Dr. A. A. Burgard.

Citizens of Ridgeley Discuss Beer Sales

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 30.—The municipal authorities of Ridgel, W. Va., a community of over 2,000, and the seat of the Western Maryland Railway shops, propose to act tomorrow in connection with the Sunday and 24-hour sale of beer. Mayor Paul K. Morgan says the action is urged by hundreds of citizens backed by all churches of the community.

Ridgeley is just across the Potomac River from Camberland, where sale of beer is forbidden on Sunday and after midnight. Mayor Morgan says the town of Ridgeley receives comparatively little revenue from the beer places, while the police forces has been doubled and yet is unable to cope with the situaiton.

Auto Billions Flow to Public Chrysler Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Sept. 30.—In a letter to be mailed today to the stockholders of Chrysler Corporation, Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board, points out how the two and one-half billion dollars which people have paid for the company's cars and trucks in the last ten years have gone right back to the public in the form of employment and purchasing power. Mr. Chrysler's letter accompanies checks to the stockholders covernig the dividend for the third quarter of this year.

"This dividend payment," says Mr. Chrysler, "goes to some 36,000 stockholders, who have invested in this business. It is the thirty-seventh dividend on the common stock of the corporation. In every year, for the last ten years, Chrysler Corporation has paid a dividend to those who have invested in it."

The statement goes on:

"From 1925, through the first six months of this year, Chrysler Corporation sold more than 3,600,000 cars, trucks and other products, for which it received approximately $2,590,000,000, exclusive of miscellaneous income from other sources.

"Out of this amount, the largest expenditures, nearly two-thirds of the total, were for materials, and general expenses (exclusive of wages and salaries) and advertising. These expenditures took approximately $1,790,000,000, the greater part of which went into jobs and wages of workers in industries supplying the automobile manufacturing industry.

"The second largest expenditure, nearly one-fifth of the total, was paid directly to Chrysler Corporation's employes. This amounted to nearly $490,000,000.

"There was expended for additional manufacturing facilities to care for the increased volume of business $111,000,000. This amount does not include the purchase of the Dodge properties in 1928, which were acquired in exchange for Chrysler Corporation common stock. A large part of it was spent for machinery, tools, dies, etc., which in turn provided work to many individuals employed by vendors of these supplies.

"Taxes took nearly $71,000,000.

"Bondholders received $84,000,000 in interest and principal on the corporation's indebtedness; and this amount was thus put back into circulation among the corporation's creditors.

"To the investors in Chrysler Corporation stock were paid approximately $79,000,000.

"It will be readily seen from this brief summary of how Chrysler Corporation disposed of the money received for its products, that most of it went right back to the public. Few people who buy cars realize how directly and immediately the purchase of an automobile is reflected in jobs and buying power throughout the industries engaged in manufacturing the things that go into it."

Heavy Imports Of Gold a Peril, Says Big Bank

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, Sept. 30.—The vast importation of gold into the United States since outbreak of Italo-Ethiopian difficulties is really a menace, the National City Bank reported today, because of its credit expansion possibilities.

In the first 26 days of September imports of gold totaled $82,546,000, compared with $45,983,000 in all of August and $16,229,000 in July. On September 26 there were shipments of $146,435,000 in gold en route to this country.

These gold shipments, the bank pointed out, will make the total of net gold imports into the United States since January 1 in excess of $1,000,000,000 and will raise the monetary gold stocks to above $9,400,000,000 as compared with $6,829,000,000 immediately following stabilization of the dollar on January 31, 1934.

"The United States gets no lasting benefit from these gold receipts, for the capital may be withdrawn as rapidly as it was sent," the bank said. "Moreover, the gold is not needed; in fact, it is a menace since bank reserves already are sufficient to support credit expansion far greater than any this country has ever known, and additions to the gold stock only increase temptation and pressure to put it to inflationary uses."

The bank said the world is suffering from disorder in trade and currency relationships of which these gold movements are symptoms. The struggle to restore prosperity is handicapped.

Steel Production at 50.8% Capacity

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimates steel production during the current week at 50.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 48.9 per cent in the previous week.

This is the highest rate reported for any week since that ended February 11, which also was 50.8 per cent of capacity. In the weeks ended January 28 and February 4 the operations were higher, but with these two exceptions the current schedule stands as the highest in more than a year.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stock Market Steadied by Strength of Motor Shares; New Haven Bonds Slump; Grains Are Strong.

By Frank MacMillen.
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Sept. 30.—In spite of occasional selling gusts the stock market held its own today with the aid of buying of motor and motor accessory stocks.

Liquidation fell mostly to the railroad group and was inspired by weakness in both the bonds and equities of New Haven, occasioned, brokers said, by nervousness over the road's ability to meet tomorrow's interest charges in full. There were no indications, however, during the session, that payment would be deferred.

At 5, the common stock of New Haven was down 1⅜, while the preferred broke 2 points to 10. The company's convertible 6s slumped 4¼ to 35. The collateral 6s and the 4½s gave up 4 and 2¾ points, respectively. Final prices for both the stocks and bonds were above their lows of the day.

The crack in New Haven securities touched off selling in other sections of the rail equity list and fractional losses were suffered by New York Central at 24¼, Pennsylvania at 27½, Southern Pacific at 18½ and Southern Railway at 9¼.

What stiffened the market's back principally was the demand for automotive shares. Buying in both groups was attributed in market quarters to the outlook for brisk sales of the new model automobiles soon to be released.

General Motors and Packard rose fractionally to 46¾ and 5¼, respectively. Chrysler, up more than a point at one time, slipped back to finish ⅛ easier at 72¾. Issues to pick up fractions to more than a point in the accessory list were Briggs at 49, Electric Auto-Lite at 31¾ and Borg Warner at 57½.

The market closed at 49.4, in terms of the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, unchanged from Saturday. Transactions totaled 1,258,630 shares.

Radio preferred "B" was in demand. Brokers said the buying was based on hopes in the financial district of payments of dividend arrears accumulated on the stock. Coca-Cola moved up a point to close at a new high for the year on buying aroused by the four-for one stock split.

The Day's Movements In Trading Markets

Stocks.

Rails were weak, motors firm, with the genera laverage slightly higher. The turnover was 1,256,630 shares.

Bonds.

Strength in industrial supported prices despite a slump in New Haven issues. Sales fell off to $8,426,000.

Curb.

Commodities.

Corn jumped 3 cents in a final flurry. Wheat was higher and cotton quiet. Sugar was steady and coffee firmer.

Money and Exchange.

Call money ¼ per cent. The pound was off ⅜ to $4.91⅛ and the French franc was unchanged at 6.59⅛ cents.

Although the steel shares were mixed at times, most managed to add fractions to their price on the advance of the American Iron and Steel Institute's estimate for operations during the current week. The rate of 50.8 per cent of capacity compared with 48.9 per cent last week. This week's operating pace was the fastest, brokers noted, for any week since that ended February 11, when output was also about 50.8 per cent.

Corn Up 3 Cents In Final Flurry

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—In a last-minute flurry, September corn shot upward 3 cents today and finished the day and the month at the season's top price record. Rapid fluctuations distinguished not only the last minute, but the final half hour of dealings in September corn, some interests stubbornly expecting the market at the last would rise the full permissible limit of 4 cents a bushel, whereas other interests looked for an equal collapse.

The corn market as a whole closed irregular, ⅞ lower to 2½ cents higher than Saturday's finish, September, 84½@85; December, 57½@58. Wheat, 1⅛@2⅞ up; December, 99¼@99⅝. Oats at ¼, declined to ⅝ advance, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to 10 cents gain.

School Savings Deposits Gain 7.9% In Year

2,826,388 Children in 8,937 Schools Have Bank Accounts.

New York, Sept. 30.—School saving in the United States celebrates its fiftieth anniversary, 1934-35, with deposits during the year of $11,575,899 and net savings at the close of $2,337,616, W. Espey Albig, deputy manager, American Bankers Association, says in his annual review of this movement in banking, the official organ of the association. The participants in this huge sum of children's savings number 2,826,388, located in 8,937 schools, he says.

"This is a gain of 7.9 per cent in deposits over a year ago and an increase in net savings, that is, the excess of deposits over withdrawals of $962,308, or 69.9 per cent," Mr. Albig's analysis points out.

"The development of school savings within the year is remarkable. Four years ago, 1931-32, the withdrawals exceeded the deposits by almost $3,000,000; the following year brought a slight improvement; last year the improvement was so great that deposits topped withdrawals by $1,375,307. This year affords proof that school saving is rapidly overcoming its great depression.

"These figures, impressive in themselves, do not reveal the whole story of growth. Of the sum deposited last year only 12.8 per cent remained at net savings. This year there remains from this year's deposits net savings of 20.1 per cent. This impressive gain can indicate but one thing, that the demand on the part of families for the aid of the children's savings in maintaining the home has been greatly decreased."

Department Store Sales Gain 10.3%.

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—The October 1 monthly review of credit and business conditions by the Federal Reserve agent at New York will state that total sales of the reporting department stores in the metropolitan area of New York for the first half of September were 10.3 per cent ahead of the corresponding period a year ago.

District Telephones Gain 12,781 in Year.

Washington was served by 196,099 telephones on August 31, a net increase of 12,781 telephones over the number in service at the end of August, 1934. Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. were $821,186 for August, compared with $773,083 for the same month last year, according to the report of operations filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

Third Quarter Business 13% Over Last Year

Total Gain for 9 Months Is Estimated At 6 Per Cent.

New York, Sept. 30.—Business activity during the third quarter was at a considerably higher rate than in the same period last year when there was a pronounced slump. Preliminary reports, say the Alexander Hamilton Institute, indicate that the increase amounted to nearly 13 per cent. As a result, activity during the first nine months was nearly 6 per cent higher than in the same period last year, after showing an increase of only 2½ per cent over last year's rate during the first six months.

It is apparent, however, that the gain in activity this year has not been the result of an increasea in the normal purchasing power of the Nation. On the basis of present estimates, the normal purchasing power appears to be somewhat lower this year than in 1934. The increase in activity has been due, in the first place, to the fact that activity last year was lower than that warranted by the normal purchasing power and part of last year's purchasing power was consequently carried over into 1935. As a result there has been a larger demand this year than last. In the second place, the increase in business activity has been due to overexpansion which always tends to follow an upturn in the demand.

The fact that the subnormal activity of last year has been more than corrected and that excessive operations are now entirely above last year's rate suggests that at least some curtailment will be in evidence during the last quarter of the year. The present prospect is, however, that any such curtailment will not be sufficient to offset the gain over last year which was made during the first nine months.

Gallico

Says Tigers Read The Newspapers Got Swell Heads

By Paul Gallico.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 30.—If the Detroit Tigers are vanquished by the Chicago Cubs in the World Series that begins here Wednesday you may attribute this calamity to the evils of higher education. I have always held that it is a great mistake to teach everyone to read, especially professional athletes. There is, for instance, the sad case of King Levinsky, the famous prize fighter. For years the King lived in a lovely dream world where everyone was wonderful and kindly, where books were wonderful things to put under short table legs, and newspapers a perfect medium to wrap things up in. His mind was asked to assimilate no more than he saw and heard, and therefore was never cluttered up with all the junk that other people thought and wrote.

This was due to the fact that, in his early youth, the King with commendable zeal escaped the catchpolls of our educational system avoided them at every turn, and grew to happy manhood unable to read or to write. Unable to write, he has never been sued by a chorus girl. Unable to read, he remained a simple, unaffected soul, secure in the knowledge that he was the greatest prize fighter in the world.

But in late life he became seized with a fatal curiosity to find out what those strange symbols stamped on newsprint might hold for him. He picked up sufficient familiarity with the printed words to learn one night that one Joe Louis was the most terrific hitter the ring has ever known. It wasn't Louis that destroyed the King one night in Chicago this summer past. It was learning.

I HAVE been in this thriving community only a few hours and the story I get from all sides is that the Detroit baseball players have been reading the newspapers and finding out how wonderful they are. And there you have it. Book learning. It's slow poison. The Little Red School House is an enemy to mankind. For a month the young men have been lying abed at night and in the morning reading glowing descriptions of themselves. Every one has a sneaking notion that he is good, but to see this suspicion confirmed on the printed page day after day makes him too acutely conscious of his virtue to go on living.

The Tigers have just finished a month of pretty bad baseball. Apparently there has been only one voice in the wilderness yelling—"get out and hustle, you bums!"—the same belonging to Gordon Stanley Cochrane. The Tigers figured to win the World Series this year against the St. Louis Cardinals, or the Giants or the Cubs, or any National League club that happened to win. The Card team of last year was one of the greatest ball clubs in baseball history, tough, scrappy, experienced in World Series play and with two superlative pitchers.

The green and excited Tigers took them to seven games, which was a considerable feat in itself. With a World Series behind them, the Tigers should be every bit as tough and effective this year, but I'm sorry to hear they've been reading the newspapers. They tell me that some of the boys won't even talk to you any more, they've become so wonderful.

AN incredible amount of wordage has been printed in Detroit and elsewhere, but chiefly in the home town, about the individual members of the baseball clubs. If the young men have swallowed a third of it, they are goners. For in every thousand ball players there is only one Mickey Cochrane who can cast a bitter and cynical eye on the column of press puffs and value it for what it is worth. As Jack Sharkey said the other day, "It's a shame, isn't it? You don't get smart in any racket and learn what it's all about, until you are just about washed out."

Local baseball fervor is a curious thing. If your home town team is a good one and a winning one, you're good, too, and more important. If you come from the same city or village that harbors or gave birth to a celebrity, you manage to make some of his glory stick to you. It raises every one's spirits a little higher. It is smart business for newspapers to feed this minor public vainglory, but only a blockhead would take such constant newsprint adoration as a personal tribute to himself. If it is true that the Tigers believe what they read in the papers, Mickey Cochrane must be going nuts.

Danger signs—the Cubs have been involved in a fighting finish. The Tigers have developed a narcissus complex and have been preening themselves for three weeks or more. The last guy to look into a mirror and adore the image there reflected was Max Adelbert Baer. The Cubs are razor-sharp. The Tigers have let down, but say they can turn it on any time they want to. Where have you heard that before? The Cubs are thrilled, youthfully excited and a little wondering at what they have accomplished. The Tigers are described as being downright swell-headed. Which would you pick. Never mind me, I've got another day or so. • • • •

Begins Series Vigil.

Chicago, Sept. 30 (AP).—Gus Swanson, Chicago, became the No. 1 besieger of the Chicago Cubs box office today when he took up a waiting post at 3:30 a. m. and announced he would stay there, rain or shine, until the sale of World Series tickets starts at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Cubs' Pitchers Rated Edge Over Foes

(Last of a series analyzing the strength of the world series rivals, Tigers and Cubs.)

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—The 21-in-a-row Chicago Cubs, one of the youngest pennant-winning teams in baseball history with an age average of but 26 years, haven't a pitcher who ever won a World Series game, but they figure to hold an edge over Mickey Cochrane's moundsmen.

Up until September 4, before the cub hurlers touched off the great winning streak that won the flag, the Tiger pitchers, who then had eased up on their superb rush, stacked up as the better mound staff. But the comparative finishes to the wire have been great contrasts.

The work of Charlie Grimm's pitchers in the 21-game winning streak has been so sensational that his starting hurler was able to go the full route in 18 out of 21 engagements. Over the spectacular streak only 24 pitchers were employed, holding the opposition to 48 runs, an average of 2.28 runs a contest. With a staff as "hot" as that, you can't deny the Cub "big four"—Lon Warneke, Charlie Root, Bill Lee and Larry French—a margin over the Tiger "big four"—Schoolboy Rowe, Elden Aucker, Tom Bridges and Alvin Crowder.

	W.	L.	R.	H.	In's
Lee	5	0	9	27	45
French	5	0	7	43	45
Warneke	4	0	8	26	38
Root	4	0	17	36	32
Henshaw	2	0	6	13	13
Carleton	1	0	1	4	9
Totals	21	0	48	153	182

Three right-handers, Warneke, Root and Lee, and one southpaw, French, will carry the pitching load for the Cubs in the series against a quartet of Tiger right-handers—Rowe, Auker, Bridges and Crowder. Both teams are well equipped with pitching reserves and probably will center the relief jobs on Southpaw Roy Henshaw, Cubs, and Roxie Lawson, the rookie who pitched shutouts in his first two American League games this season.

Seeks Soccer Title.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit Sure He Will Beat Warneke

Hank Greenberg Leads in Attack on Lawson in Batting Drill.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

DETROIT, Sept. 30.—Arkansas will furnish all the sharp-shooting ammunition for the opening of baseball's annual civil war.

It will be Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, right-handed rifleman from El Dorado, against Lonnie Warneke, the pride of the Ozarks, when the Detroit Tigers meet the charge of the sensational Chicago Cubs Wednesday in the first game of the 1935 World Series.

After driving his American League champions through a hard two-hour drill under a welcome sun at Navin Field, beaming as he saw them snap out of their late-season sluggishness with a real show of spirit, Manager Mickey Cochrane ended any lingering uncertainty about his pitching plans.

Says Rowe Is Right.

"Rowe is right and that means he's our No. 1 man," said Cochrane. The fiery backstopping pilot of the Tigers was enthusiastic as he watched the tall right-hander breeze through a half-hour's workout. The entire Tiger team, as well as Cochrane, realizes that the outcome depends on whether Rowe is "right." The Schoolboy's definite nomination by Cochrane for the opening game was the signal for fresh optimism in the Bengal camp.

"We know Warneke is tough, that he's the man we will have to beat," conceded Cochrane, "but Rowe will match everything he's got and the rest of our right-handed staff should give us the edge—maybe in six games. Those Cubs will see plenty of curved balls. You can bet on that much, no matter how long the series lasts.

Bridges, Auker Next.

"I might change my mind about the rotation, but my intention now is to pitch Rowe, Tommy Bridges and Elden Auker, in that order," continued the Detroit leader. "All three have the benefit of last year's experience. They've all got what it taks to beat the Cubs, mostly a right-handed bunch of hitters. I don't need to gamble with a smart veteran like Al Crowder, as I did for the opening game of last year's series. At that, I won't hesitate to use Crowder, if a good spot develops for him."

Cochrane, his Tigers and the advance guard of baseball's camp followers, gathering from far and near for the annual warfare and what looks like another million-dollar sports show for the faithful, had Navin Field all to themselves today. Their only rivals were the workmen putting finishing touches on the huge temporary bleachers filling at least a half acre of space off left and center fields.

Can Accommodate 48,700.

With additional capacity for 19,000 cash customers, the home park of the Tigers can accommodate 48,700 fans. Such is the baseball fever hereabouts, surpassing last year's turmoil of excitement, that the field could have been filled three times over by eager rooters seeking tickets at $5.50 each in the grand stand. The biggest turnout last year at Navin Field numbered 44,551 for the sixth game.

The Cubs, arriving this evening, get their first peek at the battleground tomorrow. Cochrane was agreeable to any plans of Charley Grimm, Chicago manager, so far as final workouts are concerned.

"I know the Cubs are hot, that they will carry the momentum of that great pennant-winning streak into the series," conceded Cochrane, "but the Tigers are a winning ball club, whenever the pressure is on and the opposition is tough. All this season, the team has come through when necessary to gain or protect the league lead.

Pressure Was Off.

"I'll admit we looked pretty sour at the finish but the pressure was off for the last week. There was nothing to fight for and everybody

Cubs Split Series Melon 26½ Ways

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—They can't point the finger at the 1935 Chicago Cubs and call them "stingy" because of their World Series melon slice up.

Remembering the taunts of the New York Yankees in 1932, when they failed to give full shares to a couple of worthy players, the Cubs met in their clubhouse today and voted 26½ full shares of their 1935 World Series cut.

With Capt. Woody English presiding, they gave full shares to 22 players, counting Manager Charlie Grimm as a player. Grimm did not attend the meeting. Coaches Roy Johnson and Johnny Corriden, Trainer Andy Lotshaw and Traveling Secretary Bob Lewis were voted full shares. A half share was voted to Clyde Shoun, rookie pitcher from Birmingham, who joined the club on August 7, and pitched a total of 12 2-3 innings.

Even the clubhouse and bat boys were cut in. Joe Bernhardt, clubhouse boy, was voted $1,000; Gilly Hasbrook, the bat boy, was voted $500, and the assistant clubhouse boy given $500.

Mrs. Clark, 1932 Titlist of Capital, Places Second With 85.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 30.—Nineteen-year-old Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, struck a telling blow in defense of her State amateur golf championship today when she fired a fine 83 to win the medal and justify her number one ranking in the autumn classic.

Her chestnut hair blowing in the wind she cut an impressive figure through the ranks of the Old Dominion's feminine golfing great as she laid down a sensational 37, one under woman's par for the first nine holes. Her game failed her coming home and she faltered to 46 but she had built up too much margin for her competitors.

Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy Club, Washington, who won the championship three years ago—the only time she ever tried—put together 9s of 42 and 43 for an aggregate 85 and second honors, two strokes behind Lily.

No one else was even alarmingly close to the slender Miss with Mrs. H. N. Allen, the Newport News hope, in third place with 90.

All Scores High.

Scores soared with the wind and totals of 99 were safely in the championship 16 along with 3 of the 4 competitors who posted an even 100 but Lily was aiming at the medal and she hit.

From the moment her first drive went straight and far down the fairway to the time she holed a sizable putt for her par on the ninth, the methodical champion gave a masterful exhibition that had the small gallery all but cheering. She was even with woman's par on every hole except the long fifth, where she sent her third shot dead to the pin and dropped the scant two-footer for a birdie. By any standard it was fine golf, measuring stroke for stroke with men's par.

It was an entirely different story coming home when her drives went awry, her irons lost their magic and the putts, even the tiny ones, stood on their toes and refused to drop dead.

Miss Harper will meet the long-driving Mrs. Hunter Watson, of Crewe, in the first round tomorrow. Mrs. Clark faces Mrs. Lucy Payne Pinder, of Richmond.

With the scores generally up in the 90's none of the favorites had much chance to fall by the wayside and all of the outstanding contenders were safely in the fold. Behind the three leaders came Mrs. J. T. Priddy, of Richmond, a former champion, with 91; Mrs. J. Nat Whitlow, of Richmond, 92; Mrs. Buford Scott, Richmond, 93; Mrs. Jean Jones, of Richmond, champion, in 1926 and again in 1929, with 94; Mrs. Watson, 94; Mrs. G. S. Hall, Amelia, 99; Mrs. Neil Wessells, Roanoke, 99; Mrs. G. C. Quesenberry, Charlottesville, 99; Mrs. George Owens, of Petersburg, 100; Mrs. J. C. Addington, Norfolk, 100, and Miss Lucy Payne Pinder, of Richmond, 100.

Harris Signs to Manage Nats in 1936

With a few deft strokes of the pen within the brief span of a half-minute's time, Bucky Harris yesterday scouted the few remaining rumors that he would not manage the Washington entry in next season's pennant race. Clark Griffith smiles his pleasure at Harris' acceptance of terms.

Harris, Held Blameless for Bad Year, Signs As Nats' 1936 Manager; Sees Bright Outlook

IN a move that contained all the surprise elements of the sun rising in the east, Clark Griffith yesterday re-appointed Bucky Harris as manager of the Washington baseball team for 1936.

The signing of the papers coincident with Griffith's announcement was a mere formality that followed the foregone conclusion that Harris would be retained as manager despite the club's dismal finish in sixth place during the 1936 season.

Griffith had intimated strongly even before the 1935 campaign began that Harris would be given at least two years to fashion the Washington club into a pennant contender. On that occasion last winter he publicly proclaimed that in view of the uncertain pitching staff that the Nats would send into the 1935 race, Harris would be held blameless for whatever failure the club encountered.

One-Year Contract.

Again it was a one-year contract that Harris signed. His salary, believed to be $12,000 yearly, remains the same, Griffith stated.

"I believe that Bucky Harris got as much out of the material he had to work with as any manager might have achieved with the same team," said Griffith.

"I regard Harris as the best manager in baseball, despite the poor season we've had. Once play starts, Harris' strategy is completely to my liking. Bucky and I see eye-to-eye on the strategy of the game and I do not regard him as a failure, despite the fact we finished in the second division."

Spikes Myer Rumor.

Only in cities other than Washington was credence ever lent the report that Harris would be replaced as manager of the Nats for 1936. Despite Griffith's announcement that he would not disclose the team's 1936 manager until the 1935 season ended, it was always apparent that Harris would be renamed.

The bulk of the rumors that Harris would be succeeded centered about Buddy Myer, the Nats' captain, but Griffith has never regarded Myer as managerial timber, despite his spirited play. And Myer never has voiced any managerial ambitions.

Outlook Is Bright.

"To say that I am elated by my reappointment would be superfluous," said Bucky. "Washington is my home town, I would rather work with Mr. Griffith than with any man in baseball, and I now think I have a valuable insight into our prospects for next year. The outlook, in my belief, is exceedingly bright."

Harris was referring, of course, to the rookie strength acquired by the Nats and the late-season efforts of three of his pitchers, Ed Linke, Earl Whitehill and Buck Newsom.

Between Roberto Estallella and Buddy Lewis, Harris expects to uncover an acceptable third baseman that would permit Cecil Travis to remain in the outfield. Linke, who finished the season with eight straight victories, now rates with Buck Newsom and Earl Whitehill as the nucleus of a clever pitching staff. Young Dick Lanahan or Henry Coppola may win the berth as the fourth starting pitcher.

To Trade Veterans.

Both Harris and Griffith are prepared to trade the outfield veterans, Heinie Manush, Johnny Stone and Fred Schulte, for additional pitching strength. They will be placed on the winter market. In one of the projected trades, Harris hopes to acquire Outfielder Gerald Walker from the Tigers.

From the draft list, the Nats expect to acquire only one player—a pitcher. By virtue of their finish in sixth place, the Nats are able to put in an early claim for the minor leaguer they have in mind. Griffith will be in attendance at the draft meeting, which will take place in Detroit during the early games of the World Series.

Diffenbaugh Wins Medal With 69

By Dave Herman.

GEORGE DIFFENBAUGH, Indian Spring County Club professional, who socks 'em a mile for a small fellow, won the medal with a scintillating 69, two under par, and established himself as the favorite yesterday in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship over his home course.

After breezing around in 35-34 that included nine straight pars on the first nine, an eagle and three birdies on the back side, Diffenbaugh went out in the afternoon and eliminated Al Jamison, of the Kenwood professional staff, 2 up, to move into the second round of match play.

Others Advance.

Joining Diffenbaugh in the quarter finals were Al Treder, of Manor, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president; Tommy Ryan, of Belle Haven; Glenn Spencer, of Maryland Country Club; Clyde DePishon, of Quantico, and Alex Taylor, of Rolling road.

Treder bowled over Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, 3 and 2, and Ryan played 15 holes in even par to oust off John Flattery, of Rodgers Forge, 4 and 3.

In a brotherly feud, Glenn Spencer eliminated his younger brother, Cliff, of Beaver Dam, 2 and 1, and, in so doing, shot a 71, even par. Spencer, 4 down at the turn, after his brother had thrown a flock of birdies at him for a 33, fought desperately to erase the advantage, but some bad putting proved costly.

One Up at Turn.

Diffenbaugh was 1 up on Jamison at the turn, and had to battle for dear life on the stretch before winning.

Johnny Bass, of Clifton Park; DePishon, Taylor and East Potomac's Mel Shorey drew byes. Charlie Betschler, defending champion from Hillendale, who eliminated Shorey after the latter, suffering with a torn ligament in his shoulder, withdrew after nine holes, and young Bass decided they wanted to get their second-round matches "over with," and played, with the result that Bass won. One down at the turn, Bass came through with some expert shotmaking to dethrone the champion, 2 up.

Thus this morning Glenn Spencer will meet Treder, DePishon will oppose Diffenbaugh and Taylor will take on Ryan. The semifinals are due in the afternoon, the 36-hole finals tomorrow.

The Parade of the All-Stars of U. S. Colleges

Virginia Tech—Its All-Time Honor Roll

By George Trevor,

IN 1932 a well-drilled eleven from V. P. I. surprised even its stanchest rooters by winning six out of seven of its games in the old Southern Conference. Defeated only by the mighty Alabama Crimson Tide, the plucky Virginia Engineers numbered among their victims such gridiron powers as Georgia, Maryland, Kentucky and the University of Virginia.

Despite some lean years there have been other teams of championship caliber. Navy was defeated in 1903 and Army suffered a similar fate two years later. The all-time list contains the names of many players from these three teams.

Great centers are traditional at Virginia Tech. 'Tis said that Rube Stiles never made a bad pass. After he had slaughtered the Army line at West Point, their center, Tipton, told him: "I'll probably make the All-American this year, but you are the man who deserves it."

Emory Hodgson's kicks were such a formidable offensive weapon that he was frequently called back to punt out of danger. Creditable eye-witnesses state that he booted the oval 85 yards in the air against Princeton. Due to his talented foot the Tigers trailed until the last 20 seconds of play, though they managed to eke out an 8-6 victory.

First Team.	Position	Second Team.
"Rube" Stiles '05	Center	Joseph Moran '26
Emory Hodgson '09	Guard	Alvis Abbott '01
Harry Stark '31	Guard	"Gene" Hite '32
William Grinus '32	Tackle	Peter Willson '05

Bird Hooper '30	Quarter	Graham Wallace '22
Frank Peake '28	Back	George Smith '24
Hunter Carpenter '05	Back	Lewis Ingles '96
Vivian Hodgson '10	Back	Herbert Gettle '22

A big and powerful guard, Harry Stark won lasting renown in "the Military Football Classic of the South"—the all-important game against Virginia Military Institute, Harvard-Yale encounters engender no keener rivalry than exists between these two Virginia institutions.

Alabama players paid unstinted tribute to the abilities of Grinus, a 210-pound speedy tackle, who was adept at breaking through the line to block punts. At present he is an electrical engineer with the Dupont Rayon Co. Another giant, Clarence Miles, will be recalled for his fighting spirit particularly in the '03 Navy game. With his leg taped from ankle to hip and unable to bend it, Miles carried on with Spartan courage. He has just resigned as V. P. I. athletic director after 25 years of service.

Tex Tilson has brought to the coaching profession the same inspiring qualities he possessed as a player. Walter Camp nicknamed Younger "The Southern Panther," due to his performance at end in the '16 Yale game. "Hoss" Lewis could fit into every position on the team, but his specialty was defensive end play.

What a wealth of all-around backs the Gobblers have had! Besides being a clever strategist and shifty ball carrier, Hooper had the knack of planting his kicks in coffin corner. "Greasy" Neale, Yale's present back field mentor, declared that Frank Peake was the "answer to a coach's prayer." In one game alone he gained 343 yards. He was without an equal in the South on run-back of punts.

Six-foot Hunter Carpenter is a demigod of Tech football. Critics who have followed the game since the early '90's believe he would have surely made the All-American had he played in the modern era. Carpenter, curiously, is also numbered among the all-time greats of North Carolina University. To "Bubbles" Hodgson goes the full back berth for his dependable plunging.

Tomorrow—William & Mary.

Capital Race Fever Rises With Laurel Opening Tomorrow

Nearby Oval To Run for 25 Days

Nine Stakes Featured; Post Time Set at 1:30 During Meeting.

LAUREL PARK, which the press agent likes to refer to as "the Saratoga of Maryland," awakes from an 11-month slumber tomorrow afternoon to become the center of horse racing in this section for 25 days. While the bangtails have been doing their stuff very thoroughly at Havre de Grace for the past two weeks, Washington does not become agog to the so-called "sport of kings" until it comes knocking at our door either at Laurel or Bowie.

Deprived of racing by law, the District fans feel a personal interest in these tracks—just a half hour from their dinner tables. While special trains are run from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, it is the support of Washingtonians that makes or breaks this Laurel.

Racing Strip at Best.

Neediness to say, the Laurel press agent is sending out the word of "everything in readiness" and "every stall is filled." Then, too, the "racing strip is in the finest shape," and "the best thoroughbreds that American and Canada can muster are slated to run." He is probably right in most instances.

Time was when Laurel had the month of October to itself as far as racing in the East was concerned. This fall finds it bucking both New York and Massachusetts. These States will draw some of the horses that otherwise would have been running in Maryland. Havre de Grace had to fall back o nthe half-milers for a number of races but the competition was keen, and, after all, a $12.20 mutuel on Dunair is just as enthusiastically received as the same price on Riskulus.

In the stake class, Laurel probably will draw more than its share of the turf stars. The track offers nine high-class events with two—the Selima Stakes and the Washington Handicap—being in the $10,000 added bracket. Practically every star in training has been nominated for one of these figures.

Steeplechases Listed.

Laurel opens the fall steeplechase season at the major tracks and will feature jumping competition on three days a week, and offers one stake event for the timber-toppers, the Shevy Chase Steeplechase, a $2,500 added event, at 2 miles.

The daily double will again be in operation and post time for the first race is 1:30 o'clock for the duration of the meeting.

The Laurel stakes and their dates follow:

October 5—The Capitol Handicap; 3-year-olds and upward; 6 furlongs; $5,000 added.

October 5—Richard Johnson Stakes; 2-year-olds; 6 furlongs; $3,500 added.

October 12—Maryland Futurity; 6 furlongs; $5,000 added. The Laurel, all ages; 1 mile; $5,000 added.

October 19—The Maryland Handicap; 3-year-olds; one and one-quarter miles; $5,000 added. Selima Stakes; 1 mile; 2-year-old fillies; $10,000 added.

October 26—The Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap; 2-year-olds; 1 mile; $3,500 added. The Washington Handicap; 3-year-olds and upward; 1¼ miles; $10,000 added.

October 23—Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap; 2 miles; 3-year-olds and upward; $2,500 added.

When Rain and Wind Failed to Stop Ryder Cup Team

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A good drenching only sharpened the games of Capt. Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, of the American Ryder Cup team, in their recent match with the British, which the Americans won. Alf Perry and Jack Busson were Britain's representatives in this particular match. Sarazen is shown putting on the ninth green. The United States duo closed out the match on the thirtieth hole.

Training Rules Surrendered By Bambino

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Mrs. George Herman Ruth has relaxed her training rules for Babe the Bambino.

"After 22 years of steady baseball, I think he's entitled to a holiday, don't you?" she asked today.

So baseball's King of Swat is romping about the golf course, eating what he wants, planning a hunting trip, and letting Mrs. Ruth attend to business.

"I haven't any plans for the Babe," she said. "I guess we've turned down something like $100,000 in contracts since he left the Boston Club. You've got to be very careful. The Babe has been the idol of American youth for a long time, while I won't have him mixed up in anything that isn't just right.

Will Go to Series.

"His business has always been baseball and so far as I know it will continue to be. We are going out to the World Series this week, and then he has three or four hunting trips planned for the fall. I don't even know if he will attend the mid-winter meeting of the club-owners. I suppose so."

Mrs. Ruth handles all the Babe's finances, and finds time to tie his tie, tend to furnishing their new Riverside Drive home, and keep an eye on the Babe's health.

"I have over 700 pictures alone to hang, and when the Babe retired, we received to date more than 35,000 letters, most of them begging him not to quit. Why, the mail alone takes up pretty near a whole room."

Is Rassling a Racket? Sure, What of It? It's Entertaining

By George Considine.

EVERY year, just as regularly as the rent falls due, some smart Aleck writes a piece in open condemnation of the art of dermatuggery (rasslin' to you). Well, as the fellow said about plunging in where wise men fear, etc., this is the first and perhaps the last attempt to point out that the muscle and maul industry is not without merit.

There can be no argument against the fact that people attend rassle shows en masse. Now the question is, "Why, in the name of Phineas Hornbottle, people patronize something that is admittedly shady and not up to the highest standards of sportsmanship?" Better than 85 per cent of the customers will tell you that they know full well that it must be a racket. But what of it?

People go to wrestling matches to be entertained, not to see a sport. They go because they like to laugh and howl and razz the antics of their favorite hero or villain. They go because rassling is not a sport, but a travesty—a travesty, which makes them forget their drab, workaday existence.

If one wants to be entertained, one opens to the dramatic page of the newspaper and reads what the critics think of the various shows. One reads the choice lines and even the plot of any given play. And then, if it seems as though as it might appeal, one goes to the show, knowing all along what is good and what is not so good.

The same thing holds true of wrestling. In speaking of rasslefests the public prints makes no bones about the fact that it is all just a joke. These same public prints bluntly talk of "rassle racket," "blood and thunder baloney," "ludicrous leering" and similar deprecations. But again what of it?

The other day we approached a very intelligent and successful businessman, who is an incurable rassle addict, and asked him, "How come?" He told us in his early youth he was more or less of a Caspar Milquetoast. His timidity was cured, he said, by going to wrestling matches and razzing the daylights out of the workmen. To this day he feels that he owes his entire self-confidence to the oft panned rasslers.

Another man—a person of poor health—who was confronted with the same question, remarked that a view of the muscle-bound behemoths always inspired him to better spirits. Still another fan said he didn't care who won the struggle-tussles. He just went to make noise.

And so it goes. Everyone turns out for a particular reason. And in each case the reason is intelligent, straight forward and, above all, reasonable. Each fan derives a vital benefit from the relaxation. Each fan is satisfied that he is getting his money's worth.

So the next time some smart Aleck feels that is his bounden duty to "wise you up about this rassle racket" just look him straight in the eye and ask, "What of it?"

Detroit Confident On Eve of Series

seemed to relax. Beginning today, things are different. There will be no more loafing."

The echoes of Cochrane's dressing room "pep talk" were reflected in the Tiger showing on the practice team. A seasoned outfit, two-time pennant-winner, the battering Bengals reassured their manager by getting down to business briskly again. Led by big Hank Greenberg, the team's No. 1 powerhouse, they belted the offierings of Roxie Lawson, rookie twirler.

Barrier Is Higher.

Greenberg smashed one ball clear through the screen in front of the left field bleachers. The barrier is much higher than last year and will put a premium on marksmanship in the event there is any repetition of the vegetable shower aimed at Joe Medwick of the Cardinals in the last game of the 1934 series.

"Only two bases on a shot like that!" mourned the big first baseman. Under the ground rules this year the screen must be cleared to produce a home run. But it's some 20 feet nearer the plate and a better target. If the big hitters start teeing-off, a new World Series record for two-baggers may be hung up.

Middletown Conquers Waynesboro in Finale

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 30.—Middletown, champion of the Frederick County League, won the third and deciding game of the post season series with Waynesboro, Southern Franklin County League pennant winner, yesterday at Boonsboro, 8-6. The game was called at the end of the eighth because of rain. Arthur Hauver, while hit hard, was effective with men on the bases.

Hard Practice Is Ahead for Cavaliers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Sept. 30.—"We'll just keep on sawing wood," Coach Gus Tebell told the Virginia varsity grid squad this afternoon as preparations were begun for the Davidson game here next Saturday.

Coach Tebell had nothing but praise for the fine play of Hampden-Sydney against Virginia, which gave the Tigers their first victory over the Cavaliers in 13 games over 30 years.

He had plenty to say, however, as to what Virginia might have done. And he let his charges know that they could expect double drill in blocking and tackling in getting ready for the game with Davidson and that with Navy to be played on October 10.

Expected to Slump.

The Cavaliers had been expected to slump after their up and coming exhibition against William and Mary on September 21, but not to the extent that they did. But Coach Tebell pointed out that any future success must be built upon correcting past mistakes, and he set his charges to work today with a somewhat more comprehensive drill than is usual on Monday afternoons.

Virginia has a difficult assignment in playing both Davidson and Navy with only five days in between. No serious injuries, however, appear to have been suffered in playing Hampden-Sydney, and the coaches hope to have the full strength of the Cavaliers available for these two contests.

Elkins Eleven Rallies To Down Parsons, 13-9

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., Sept. 30.—Elkins High gridders defeated Parsons High here, 13-9. Parsons led at half, 9-0, the result of a touchdown by Howard Cox and an extra point kicked by Riley. The third quarter was scoreless. With five minutes remaining in the final session, Currence tallied for the locals on an end run. In the last minute Currence tallied again.

It will be the first time in history the Mountaineers have played football at Elkins.

Penn to Renew Rivalry With Princeton

Teams to Clash Saturday for First Time on Grid in 41 Years.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Only a few miles removed from the scene of the memorable game 41 years ago that resulted in the breaking off of gridiron relations, Princeton and Pennsylvania will forget the past and meet next Saturday on the striped turf within the confines of Palmer Stadium.

A short distance down the pike, on the Trenton State Fair Grounds, the elevens of the two universities met on November 10, 1894. "Bad blood" developed in the game, which was won by Pennsylvania, 12 to 0, and only time has been able to heal the wound.

Not only because it restores a rivalry that dates far back into the last century, the Princeton-Penn game rates among the leading contests of the week-end. With only one defeat in the last two seasons, Princeton will be represented by a team that on paper, at least, appears sufficiently equipped to carry on at that pace.

For both teams it will be their toughest opening assignment in many years. While it will likely attrack a capacity attendance, some dyed-in-the-wool football fans lament the fact that two such promising teams are going to start the season against each other. Coach Fritz Crisler isn't optimistic about the outcome.

"It isn't unlikely that our boys will take a beating," said the Princeton mentor.

On their record of the last two seasons the Nassau Tigers should rule favorites, but the betting so far has been at even money.

On the Air Today

It's been a little more than four years since Kate Smith became big-time on the air. Despite all the spoofing about the mountain, the "hello, everybody" and the direction of her splendid efforts toward brightening the lives of unfortunates, Kate Smith remains a distinct air personality and a pleasant hour of entertainment.

She'll feature in her new quarter-hours (Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays weekly) persons who have splashed into the news. Ted Collins, her manager, again will announce her programs and Jack Miller, who has been her musical director since her debut at C. B. S. in 1931, again conducts the band. The time is 7:30; the station, WJSV.

• • • •

No doubt Helen Hayes' appearance will attract more listening attention than Kate Smith, Miss Hayes being almost a newcomer to the air. (It is interesting that both Miss Smith and Miss Hayes are claimed as "home-town products" here in Washington.) Miss Hayes' new weekly half-hours inaugurate a new type of air entertainment employing so successful a star of the legitimate theater.

"The New Penny," Miss Hayes' air vehicle, will be of the serial type of presentation. She will play a single character throughout the entire series, one created to bring out her particular talents. It is the first time a serial type of dramatic presentation made popular by such programs as "One Man's Family," "House of Glass" and "The Goldbergs," has been used as a vehicle for a famous stage star.

The time is 9:30 p. m., and the station WMAL.

• • • •

Echoes of rifle shots among the Dunbury hills will resound as the Hatfield and Carstairs clans renew their hillbilly feuds tonight. In other words, Walter O'Keefe and the "Caravan" shove off on a twice-weekly series of half-hourly, hilarity, with most of last winter's cast on hand: Glen Gray and the Casa Loma orchestra, Louis Sorin, Alice Frost, Peewee Hunt, Kenny Sargent, Ted Husing and one newcomer—Deane Janis, who replaces Annette Hanshaw. "The Caravan" will be heard Tuesday and Thursday nights, at 9. WJSV.

• • • •

Ida Bailey Allen renews her radio quarter hours this morning at 11, supported by Franz, a chef of renown, and Morton Bowe, tenor . . . "Easy Aces" begins its sixth radio year at WMAL, at 7 tonight, with the familiar "at home" idea . . . "You and Your Government" begins its new season's series at WRC, at 7:45 p. m., with "National Planning" the theme. Frederic A. Delano is heard in the inaugural tonight . . . Full details of the "radio open" contest, now ready for the finals, will be given in Eddie Duchin's half-hour at 9:30 p. m., WRC. Lansing Hatfield, Washington's contestant, is in the finals—and the money.

• • • •

The Old Family Doctor answers the question, "What Is a Dietician?" in his Tuesday morning talk, WMAL, at 11:15. He'll be assisted by Mildred Parker and Rowena, president of the Washington Dietetic Association . . . The "Three Little Words," who began their air careers here in Washington last winter, are presented on the CBS net Tuesday, at 4:45 (WJSV) beginning today . . . Lawrence Tibbett features native folk melodies, WJSV, at 8:30 . . . Ben Bernie presents Gertrude Niesen as guest star, WRC, at 9.

• • • •

The new Esso news periods will be broadcast by WMAL beginning next Monday, not today, as reported in this space yesterday. And "Cheerio," as most of you know, is back at WMAL, not WRC. Otherwise "On the Air" yesterday was correct!

Wheat Famine Danger Seen In Light Crop

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Repeated warnings from the West of a threatened wheat famine, consistently denied by officials of the AAA, were strongly supported yesterday in a statement issued by Harry Brisker, grain specialist of Harriman & Keech, New York stock brokerage concern.

A recent statement by E. J. Smiley, secretary of the Kansas Grain Dealers Association in Topeka, Kans., declared that the United States would not produce sufficient wheat this year to supply its normal needs.

In reply, George E. Farrell, head of the AAA wheat section, said there was "nothing in any way alarming in the wheat situation and no possibility of a shortage."

Farrell quoted the Government on estimated wheat yield of 593,000,000 bushels together with the estimated carryover of 153,000,000 bushels as 121,000,000 bushels in excess of the needed 625,000,000 bushels for domestic consumption.

Brisker pointed out that an official bulletin of the Department of Agriculture declared that only 69 per cent of the estimated spring wheat crop of 160,000,000 bushels would be fit for milling purposes.

Of the winter wheat estimate of 430,000,000 bushels, the department declared only 89 per cent would be suitable for bread wheat. This leaves a corrected figure of only 500,000,000 bushels as this year's wheat crop.

In addition, Brisker declared, the drought and rust damage has substantially lightened wheat this year, and, while the average weight of spring wheat is 1 bushel to 60 pounds of flour, the millers are currently receiving only about 52 pounds from each bushel.

As a result, the domestic consumption will be increased between 10 and 15 per cent, or from the 625,000,000 normal to approximately 700,000,000.

In the carryover estimate, Farrell's figure of 153,000,000 is at odds with the estimate of 65,000,000 given by Smiley.

Even taking the Government figure of 150,000,000 bushels carryover as correct, Brisker declared, total crop and supplies will still be only 650,000,000 bushels, as compared with the estimated normal needs of 700,000,000 bushels.

Cipriano, Stone Honored.

Ralph Cipriano of the Washington office of the New York Life Insurance Co., was elected president at the annual meeting of the company convention just concluded at Mount Pocono, Pa., it was learned yesterday. Warren Sanford Stone of the same office was named vice president.

Both appointees were leaders in volume of business written and number of lives insured during the past year. At the convention their performance was lauded as outstanding among the approximately 8,000 salesmen of the company in the Atlantic section.

At the same time, Earl D. Krewson, agency director of the Washington office, announced that more agents had qualified for inclusion in the company's honor organization than ever before. The following representatives have been admitted to membership in the current educational meetings of the office:

Cipriano, Loren Cluster, Herman Friedman, Frank Jude, Earl Krewson, Leo Lloyd, John Lynch, Alma McCrum, Walter Pangle, Chalmers Roland, David Samakow, B. F. Satterfield, R. C. Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Without the usual week-end accumulation of orders owing to political uncertainties, trading was quiet on the stock exchange today. Some professional selling caused side-tracked securities decline, while other sections drooped, due to lack of support. A few industrials were supported. The market closed irregular.

Paris—A selling wave on the bourse today due to uneasiness over the Italian-Ethiopian and Memel situations, augmented by the usual month-end liquidation, drove prices lower. Rentes, bank stocks and most industrial and international issues declined. The closing was heavy.

STRANGE as it seems, the world records for the 100-yard dash from a standing start are identical both for sprinting and ice skating. Charles Jewtraw, amateur, set the record for skating in 1923. Several sprinters hold the 100-yard record jointly at 9.4 seconds.

This time has been beaten for the 100 yards in both running and skating, but not officially. H. Davidson skated 100 yards in nine seconds at Red Bank, N. J., in 1895, but a strong wind made the record unofficial. Charlie Paddock once ran the hundred in 8.9 seconds from a flying start.

The River Jordan which flows into the salt-laden Dead Sea has its origin in a fresh water stream flowing from out of a cave—yet long before it reaches the Dead Sea it becomes very salty. It remains fresh for about two-thirds of its length, but in the lower valley salt springs rising in the bed of the river change it from a fresh to a salt stream. Less than a century ago scientists attributed the saltiness to beds of salt over which the river was thought to flow.

The 17-year-old locust goes into the ground and stays there 17 years before emerging for a period of about a month. There are, however, about 30 different broods of these 17-year locusts and the periods overlap so that some brood appears somewhere every year. Thus a brood that entered the ground 17 years ago will appear this year, while another that entered the ground only 16 years ago will emerge next year, and so on.
